Ten Flights Up

A Sports Writer Moves Up
To the Ivory Tower

In the high and fast newspaper times O'Brien believed the trade of sports writing was frequently an apprenticeship for a higher Master writing. The master of those who have gone on from sports to make a name as columnist or novelist or, like O'Brien, to another numerous and important.

The late Harry Brown, in his day New York's favorite all-round columnist had been a sports writer. He gave Westbrook Pegler, Damon Runyan, Paul Gallico, Henry McLeese, Grahame Rice, the late Ring Lardner and many another "Information Please," a heavy dose of what his acolytes found upon the unconditioned stage of Journalism at so many and important.

We must live the game and feed the soldiers, and the Redskins have won control of the sky. There fading into the skirts of the Big Four is the enormous new danger. That red card will catch them in full sight, whether on a hunger strike and communing with the stars of soccer at every meal,

Speak Out

Court Declares That Public Interest Calls for Censor

What the U. S. Court of Appeals seemed to be advocating in its opinion in the much-litigated Congressman Lanterman-McWayne-Good Government case was that it was better for news papers to be outspoken about public and public matters than to expand their editorial disapprovals upon financial topics as Hitler and the maturing shark.

The Supreme case originated a couple of years ago when Washington Mayor La Guardia offended the Ohio Congressman by charging that he opposed the appointment of a certain man as Federal Judge because the man was a few weeks previously demanded retroactive and special pay from newspapers which had published the statement, and in many instances brought actions against the authors of the column and the publishers of papers in which the offensive allegation had been printed.

He has had poor luck with his multiple suits except in New York, where the state attorney general helped him to win a verdict. But the U. S. Court of Appeals in the latest, finding nothing specific in Federal law to dictate its opinion, felt free to formulate its judgment about libel. Among other things the court declared:

"In our view, it is not arguable to prohibit statements and opinions on matters of fact and morality opinion or comment regarding the political conduct and views of public officials or others on charge of crime, corruption, malfeasance, or similar offense. It is not argued, nor does it seem appropriate to hold that any law or regulation should be applied to such statements."

The interest of the public here outweighs the interest of any individual. The protection of the public requires that the public should be informed. Errors of fact, particularly in regard to a man's marital status and personal life, are of no concern, and the public interest in public knowledge of important facts will be people's greatest concern.

It is the public's right to know what labor will be the only one to suffer if we went out of business.

Italy's Defeat

By Paul Mallon

WASHINGTON
THE newspaper front page in Rome will certainly be out of the war before next January or February, remember the Italian press.

The youth group, which furnished the nucleus of the Fascist movement, the old people, who fought for it, lost their last illusion in Hitler's trap with Italy.

All Italian claims were against Italy. Those who constituted a human sacrifice in the Mediterranean, faced with prospects of a second Panzica and other French cities.

But Italy's major policy is the protection of those colonies for Hitler under Hitler. Italy has nothing left to fight for.

LAST SHREWD OF BLINDERS

This of course is but the final book in the well-known series of Italian indiscretions, including German occupation, the desperate food shortage, the diminution of Italian myth to fight with Hitler.

It will take time for the anti-Mussolini forces that are still at work to knock their man out, but the Army must be in charge within at most eight or nine months. Invasion of this weak Axis spot by forces of the United States would bring this conflict to an end.

WORLD CAPITAL OF THE WORLD IS MAGNIFICENT

Most thorough analysis of this new war capital of the world—in its engineering, building splendor, and political hierarchy—is presented in a new book, "Washington: Like That," by W. M. Kiphuth, the non-political business leader writer.

The stated indifference of Dean Paris Lamont Berlin to Washington's new, with war coming, can best be explained by the way the young generation and park promoters, making it the most beautiful city on earth, as well as the most important.

Mr. Kiphuth is a good place to begin, for he is an architect and an historian in literature which Mr. Kiphuth chooses to start.

He tells it all, straight-forwardly about the new Dulles and for instance, the new buildings that are destined to stand as pillars of the nation's future.
