Whether or not the textile industry can supply these needs, even with a top manpower priority, is a question involving some highly practical and human faction. The weekly pay envelope is still the most potent attraction for workingmore, and the fact is that textile

In the early months of 1843 a migraden of textile workers began to shipsulfding, shell-making, carpentering and their mushroom war jobs where the seed for workers was so acute that alnest any old wages were paid to gethem. In these industries a worker, bysitting up with living conditions which were miserable more often than they week or so with ease, considerably more by working into over-time and doubleine. Despite wage increases along the

It is worth nothing that this wage, on the average, included this limited to the contained that the contained that is the contained that is the contained that is the contained that it is due in large part to the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it and is the contained that it is due in large part to the fact that it and in the fact that it is due in large part to the fact that it and is a manufacturing are women; and most women have household duties. But in any case, the war-production problem of the textile industry remains a problem of insufficient workers due primarily to an incommensurate wage. The new priority may help, but it will scarcely turn the tide of employment back into the mills, or the balance of national trade in favor of a low-wage region.

A good deal of indignation has been expressed because Russia, in those portions of Europe which it had occupied, clapped on an absolute blackout on news asav what it chose to hand out.

This is a two-headed proscription, the first of which asserts that our soldiers in the European Theater of Operations are not to be allowed to know what is going on at home or abroad if, in the judgment of the cussors, knowledge of the fact might lower their morale. Secondly, and worse, the people of the United States are not to be allowed to know what is going on in the ETO if, again in the judgment of the ETO if, again in the judgment of the ETO if, again in the judgment of the Allowed to knowledge of the fact might endanger relations between the U.
