Another Victory

"Again and again, my fellow clitrens, mothers who lost their sons in Prance have come to me and, taking my hand, have shed tears upon it not only, but they have added. God bless you, Mr. President."

they have added. God bless you. Mr. President.'

"Why, my fellow citizens, should the pray God to bless me? I advised the Congress of the United States to create the estimation that led to the death of their sons. I ordered their sonis overseas, I consented to their sons being put in the most difficult parts of the battle, where death was certain, as in the Impenetrable difficulties of the forest of Argonne. Why should they weep upon my hand and call down the blessings of God upon me? Because they believe that their boys died for something that vastly transcends any of the immediate and palpable objects of war. They believe that their sons saved the liberty of the world. They believe that wrapped up with the liberty of the world. They define the world is the continuous protection of that liberty by the concerted powers of all the civilized world..."

"There is one thing that the American people always rise and extend their hand to, and that is the truth of justice and of liberty and of peace. We have accepted that truth and we are soing to be ied by it and it is soing to lead us, and through us the world, out into pastures of quietness and peace such as the world never dreamed of before."

Found—& Lost

There must have been general regret down at City Hall at the resignation of Dr. Ross Cameron as City Health Officer. His is an important department, his service essential. For long it had needed a head. Finally, after much searching, the very man for the job was found and employed. Dr. Cameron pitched into his work surefootedly and with zeal. Then he got the offer of a bigger job, and the City is compelled to start looking all over again.

It will not be easy to fill Dr. Cameron's place with a person of comparable ability. In the short time that he has been here he has, deepthe limitations imposed by the war, undertaken at least two major (and to Charlotte novel) projects and has brought his department forward as an efficient, alert factor in community well-being. He was a find, Able health officers, had to come by at any time, are in these days a real scarcity.

This condition attests to the worth of a service undertaken by the University of North Carolina for the benefit at the people of the state. Few of them know it, but at Chapel Hill the University includes a School of Public Health for the professional training of special-

At the moment, we daresay, the school is just about lacking a student body, but in due time it will revive and hear its name bless by cities and counttes in need of health officers. It offers another instance in which the University, close to the people it serves, has anticipated their needs.

Who's Talking?

Last month, in the midst of other high excitements, Soviet Russia "denounced" her non-aggression pact with Japan, and gave some hope that she, too, would be in at the kill in the Pacific. But just as we were sitting down to speculate on that significant development, in came word from Washington. The Office of Censorship forbade that newspapers comment in any way on the probable relations between Russia and Japan. It suggested that any such romment would be obviously embarrassing, and perhaps rutinous.

The American press resented that high-handed piece of business, and said so. We can recall having joined the chorus ourselves. There seemed to be no earthly reason why newspapers or individuals should not reflect upon the intentions of one Eastern ally toward. to be none. Indeed, the Russians themselves, though they customarily hide their affairs behind the world's strictest censorship, are making Washington's policy laughable. For while we are being cautioned to silence on the tunder Russo-Japanese situation, Moscow is freely circulating news calculated to cause major tremors in Tokyo.

For one thing, Russia announced this week that the Red Army, having just finished the bloodlest and most gruel-history, taken and the second of the tremost and major the tremost and tremost and Japan.

And hard on the heels of that story came the report of a warm letter to Moscow from residents of Sakhalin Island, that half Russian, half Japanese bone of contention tying just above the Jap homeland. For some reason the letter was given great prominence in the Moscow press. Tokyo could only have assumed that this, too, was a message pregnant with meaning. So Americans must not speculate, while the Russians are deliberately telegraphing ominous intentions to the East. Seems screwy to us.
