Prices, Taxes And Recovery

DEESIDEST TRUMAN'S message on the Iong-range Marshall Plan for European recovery sheds illumination on the Administration price and tax policies. His conservative estimate that the program will cost America $17 billion oyer a four-year period is based on the calculation that inflation will be contained at or near its present high level and slowly taper off. It is the present high level and slowly taper off. It is the first table to the tendence of the signature of the key to the success of this signatic war turne.

the key to the success of this gigantic venture.

If any further proof were needed that this nation should take no unnecessary risks and refuse to use no device that promises to set the brakes on inflation, this huge reconstruction bill provides it. It gives added weight to the President's contention that the Federal surplus should be used to reduce the public debt and maintain adequate reserves before there is a tax reduction. Reduction of the debt, which would tighten credit and reduce the money supply, is an anti-inflationary step. On the other hand, an income tax slash of the size and character proposed by the Republicans would increase consumer buying power and thus have an inflationary effect.

The price spiral is adding daily to the rice of the hand, an income star size of the content of the fact by received to the fact by received to that fact by received to the fact by received to that fact by received to that fact by received to the fact gered.

Shipments from the Western Hemisphere over the four-year period are estimated at $83,000,000.00 in value and $13,000,000.00 of that would come from the United States. The strain which that would place on our economy is only partly suggested by these hig figures. The chance for further inflationary disturbance shows up in the statement of commitments on commodities for which the demand in both this country and Europe accords the supply.

It is a minomer to call this the European Recovery Program. It is the Western world's program for survival, its plan to win a "cold war" against communism and a world war against common breakdown. The President's message is a call to meet a national crisis with no half-measures.

Tobacco To Fight For America

The American cigarette may become one of the potent weapons in the ideological, political and economic battle for Germany which is shaping up between the Western Allies and Boroite Russia. A plan that would make the German smokers work effectively for the democratic cause, and at the same time improve the economic situation in the United States, is more about the same time improve the economic situation in the United States, is committed by North Carolina's Senator William B. Unstead.

Senator Unstead proposed that the Committee make available to Germany at least 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco now held by the Commodity Credit Corporation for the use of the German tobacco industry in the production of tobacco products. This would be approximately one year's supply and it represents less than a fifth of the surplus tobacco which the CCO will have on hand, the production of tobacco products. This would be approximately one year's supply and it represents less than a fifth of the surplus tobacco which the CCO will have on hand, revoid make it possible to break up the black market in cigarettee which has been a victous feature of the German inflation.

The Unstead facts and figures make an impressive case for the German inflation. The Unstead facts and figures make an impressive case for the German tobacco which by hand-out to German to be approximated to committee the representation of the surplus of the committee of the German inflation.

Days Of December

WE ARE living in the midst of December the land! The apirt to fellowship and good-will, of willing gardifices and earnest co-operation. Everywhere man's eagerness to comfort and to console, to share and help, to live and help live. Emply stocking funds, canteen parties. Big Brothers' projects, March of Dines campsains, thoughts of mercy, acts of kindness—men everywhere are tireless in their efforts to be good and noble and holy. Oh, to make these days of December less rare; to make every day, every mouth as the days of December days of the end of the second of the secon WE ARE living in the midst of Decemmaskind desires it. There is no method of enforcing love—and who would want that type of love. There is no plan to demand mercy—and who could accept it? Let man outlaw the evil-from his heart and the thoughts of ugliness from his mind—that is the only permanent and effective plan. Neither a police force nor punishment makes for goodness and for beauty, but the makes for goodness and for beauty, but the promptings of his conscience, the spiritual joy in his beart and that is our program—to make our life an eternal December—days of thanksytving and gratitude, holi-days of thanksytving and gratitude, holi-d

We rejoice with our fellowmen for the spirit that is this essaon's, this symbol of brotherhood, of religious de votion. We thrill at the sight of goodness and the little remembered acts of kindness and of love—the care for the unfortunate, the sharing of life's blessings, the comradeship, the spiritual sanctification of human life. A religious experience, unparalleled—these religious experience, unparalleled—the kind of world we should have and can have.

WHAT's blocking all this? Says the commission:

The main block is higher decuation's failure to realize the role it should be playing in a democratic control, a fuller role than now, what the commission is shooting at — that the universities would take deducation to the people wherever they are to be found. In this way colleges and universities would to more useful in their community, whether it's a City or a State.
