

Farm Price Support

A GREAT DEAL of nonsense has been said about the new farm price support program...

In working themselves up into a lather, these indignant gentlemen ignore the fact that...

The United States and Canada are both producing about 40 per cent more food...

SPUDS PROPPED In working in their case, the indignant gentlemen ignore the fact that...

When the ordinary sensible individual will ask could not potatoes be raised in the same...

In Washington, the powerful farm lobby was at work...

Samuel Grafton

Seaside Reflections

THIS little place is fairly conservative but even here conservative opinion does not seem so sure of itself as it did a year ago...

One of the interesting things I noticed about high prices, I thought...

That the world will yet decide that the soldiers who were the gray and died in the trenches...

Slavery, the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

Slavery, the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

Slavery, the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

Slavery, the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

Slavery, the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

The Men Who Won't Run

DEMOCRACY is always being flitted by the lethargic citizen. She makes eyes in vain at the prominent man of business...

But you think, even so, that a group of influential and respected leaders in Charlotte could get together a rattling good...

It doesn't make us to tremble in our boots. We think Charlotte can face the future with confidence that good government can be had of the men who are...

Undermining in Moscow?

WE cannot say, if the worst comes to us in the troubled years ahead, that we were warned. A clear voice has sounded. Moscow is full of American "plunks"...

He picked an appropriate spot from time to time to launch his first blast. In Berlin, he was the first to attack Hitler...

The resignation—or dismissal—of Mr. Willis becomes disturbing only with his assertion that our Moscow Embassy is full of men who are not able to handle the job...

The Hornets Ain't Right

IT'S a grand old season. The furnace goes on for the last time and the crab grass comes back in the yard. The lady spends $367 cleaning up and matching the color...

There is a moment, you understand, when the world changes. One trembling moment of ecstasy when the citizen feels a heavenly twinge of the liver and suffers a new clarity of vision...

Small fry berate the calendar-makers and raise shrill cries in their collective bargaining for an earlier opening of the barefoot season...

Another Voice The Power Of Appointment NORTH CAROLINA'S Governor, always something of a forgotten man...

stepping stones to higher political and administrative offices. This is it that once more North Carolina's Governor has assumed his role as a personage of importance...

Today, that biennial change has come. An important-looking Durham with briefcases is again finding his way to His Excellency's office—Gurken Herald.

Besides added administrative strength, the power appointment is no inconsiderable political instrument. It is a delicate balance between East and West. Aspirants to various commissions and boards usually look upon such appointments as necessary...

already in the field—most of them good men and "best people." We're not ashamed of the present lineup, nor afraid of it. But we are not able to handle the job...

The present Council was elected on such a basis, and has served the City well. A total or partial "GI Group" victory might well continue in that tradition...

It is depressing enough to hear at home the men who seem to have no desire to get along with Russia on any basis. It is alarming to hear this charge that our Embassy is busy creating ill-will in Moscow...

People's Platform The Trib Discovers The South ELGIN HILL. I AM a native of the South (Charlotte, N.C.) and I could help but be a bit turned up when I read the attached article...

I think that one of your reporters could find some very interesting—shocking—deplorable conditions in Chicago... shacks, with no paint, rags and trash dumped on the back porch...

What do you think? —PAUL K. COWHIG. In the interest of North-South unity we reprint a portion of The Tribune article...

GREENVILLE, S. C.—Carved in deep letters in the granite of the conference center monument in front of the Greenville public library is the creed which still is the key to the emotional, traditional, and historical unity of the Southern States...

That the world will yet decide that the soldiers who were the gray and died in the trenches of the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

This reporter flew over a series of small factories which have been built near some hydro-electric power generating stations...

A bookkeeper in Memphis, Tenn., told The Tribune that the difference in Northern and Southern histories is in the teacher. He meant that the teacher's comments and lectures colored the history being taught...

Lincoln is respected more highly than a Northern might expect to find. The Gettysburg Address is read and recited. Reconstruction is treated in a chapter titled "The States That Were Not in the Union."

AMERICAN housewives will be glad to know that the high cost of living worries the wives of Senators as well as the rest. Last week Mrs. Truman and Mrs. James P. Byrnes were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler...

The ladies got started on the high cost of living when Mrs. E. A. Tamm, wife of the Chief Justice, told about an English friend who recently arrived in this country. "What was shocked at the cost of things over here," Mrs. Hill said...

That's not true," she said. "The fact is that although the British may pay more of a Federal income tax, when you go back to England to buy your clothes, even though at least as much income taxes here and I think more."

Glomy Secret Caucus IT was a none-too-happy caucus House Republicans held early this week as they prepared to steamroller the harsh Hartley Labor Bill through the House of Representatives...

People's Platform The Trib Discovers The South

ELGIN HILL

I AM a native of the South (Charlotte, N.C.) and I could help but be a bit turned up when I read the attached article...

I think that one of your reporters could find some very interesting—shocking—deplorable conditions in Chicago... shacks, with no paint, rags and trash dumped on the back porch...

What do you think? —PAUL K. COWHIG. In the interest of North-South unity we reprint a portion of The Tribune article...

GREENVILLE, S. C.—Carved in deep letters in the granite of the conference center monument in front of the Greenville public library is the creed which still is the key to the emotional, traditional, and historical unity of the Southern States...

That the world will yet decide that the soldiers who were the gray and died in the trenches of the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

This reporter flew over a series of small factories which have been built near some hydro-electric power generating stations...

A bookkeeper in Memphis, Tenn., told The Tribune that the difference in Northern and Southern histories is in the teacher. He meant that the teacher's comments and lectures colored the history being taught...

Lincoln is respected more highly than a Northern might expect to find. The Gettysburg Address is read and recited. Reconstruction is treated in a chapter titled "The States That Were Not in the Union."

AMERICAN housewives will be glad to know that the high cost of living worries the wives of Senators as well as the rest. Last week Mrs. Truman and Mrs. James P. Byrnes were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler...

The ladies got started on the high cost of living when Mrs. E. A. Tamm, wife of the Chief Justice, told about an English friend who recently arrived in this country. "What was shocked at the cost of things over here," Mrs. Hill said...

That's not true," she said. "The fact is that although the British may pay more of a Federal income tax, when you go back to England to buy your clothes, even though at least as much income taxes here and I think more."

People's Platform The Trib Discovers The South

ELGIN HILL

I AM a native of the South (Charlotte, N.C.) and I could help but be a bit turned up when I read the attached article...

I think that one of your reporters could find some very interesting—shocking—deplorable conditions in Chicago... shacks, with no paint, rags and trash dumped on the back porch...

What do you think? —PAUL K. COWHIG. In the interest of North-South unity we reprint a portion of The Tribune article...

GREENVILLE, S. C.—Carved in deep letters in the granite of the conference center monument in front of the Greenville public library is the creed which still is the key to the emotional, traditional, and historical unity of the Southern States...

That the world will yet decide that the soldiers who were the gray and died in the trenches of the Civil War, and Reconstruction remain live subjects of conversation and press discussion...

This reporter flew over a series of small factories which have been built near some hydro-electric power generating stations...

A bookkeeper in Memphis, Tenn., told The Tribune that the difference in Northern and Southern histories is in the teacher. He meant that the teacher's comments and lectures colored the history being taught...

Lincoln is respected more highly than a Northern might expect to find. The Gettysburg Address is read and recited. Reconstruction is treated in a chapter titled "The States That Were Not in the Union."

AMERICAN housewives will be glad to know that the high cost of living worries the wives of Senators as well as the rest. Last week Mrs. Truman and Mrs. James P. Byrnes were guests of honor at a dinner given by Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler...

The ladies got started on the high cost of living when Mrs. E. A. Tamm, wife of the Chief Justice, told about an English friend who recently arrived in this country. "What was shocked at the cost of things over here," Mrs. Hill said...

That's not true," she said. "The fact is that although the British may pay more of a Federal income tax, when you go back to England to buy your clothes, even though at least as much income taxes here and I think more."

Level-headed Speaker Joe Martin opened the meeting by reading the 1946 GOP platform—pledging curbed labor abuses, lower taxes, reduced expenditures and a purge of Communists from the party...

"I think it is a good idea that he's trying to do," said New Jersey's Fred Hartley, chairman of the Labor Committee, but various letters and reports showed the situation was terrible and something must be done about it.

As he proceeded, Hartley began to wave his arms and get red in the face. He said he got an application from the various sections of the bill, he was shouting. "It is a good idea that he's trying to do," said New Jersey's Fred Hartley, chairman of the Labor Committee, but various letters and reports showed the situation was terrible and something must be done about it.

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

Cool Majority Leader Charles Halleck of Indiana followed Hartley and said he had a "strong feeling" that the bill was a "good one." "It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

Level-headed Speaker Joe Martin opened the meeting by reading the 1946 GOP platform—pledging curbed labor abuses, lower taxes, reduced expenditures and a purge of Communists from the party...

"I think it is a good idea that he's trying to do," said New Jersey's Fred Hartley, chairman of the Labor Committee, but various letters and reports showed the situation was terrible and something must be done about it.

As he proceeded, Hartley began to wave his arms and get red in the face. He said he got an application from the various sections of the bill, he was shouting. "It is a good idea that he's trying to do," said New Jersey's Fred Hartley, chairman of the Labor Committee, but various letters and reports showed the situation was terrible and something must be done about it.

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."

"It is our solemn promise," he declared, "to redeem to the American people every campaign pledge we have made. As for the bill, Hartley said he supports it as fully as any Republican, however and went on to praise it enthusiastically that "maybe it goes far in some respects." He said that it represented the views of all but four members of the House, and that it was a "splendid bill."