A MATTER OF PERSPECTIVE VE ilicited for eighteen months. Scores of speeches have been made before civic clubs and church groups. Big maps have been displayed in public places and in the newspapers. Each of 33,000 registered voters received by mall an outline of the program the week before the bond election. Several weeks ago, local newspapers told of the selection of an architectic design the Latta Park building. Yet, it wasn't until this week that the profesting residents came before the City Council, completely by-passing the Park & Recreation Commission. We have no doybt that they were acting the coof gaith, they have a right to good gaith, they have a right to make the coof gaith, they have a right on carful consideration. In the process however, it might be a good leas to call a layer public meeting at which other Dilworth residents who are not quite so close to the proposed site could be heard. It's entirely probable that they favor the project enthusiagitally. At any rate, if worst comes to worst, DERSPECTIVE is important in sizing up anything, and it works both ways. A drum galocette imay be snarry enough in midfield and yet not bear close inspection; the intricate design of a fine mantille may bring onbs and ahs when held close, and be totally unimpressive at a distance.

So it is in the realm of public affairs. A street widening project, a tadium, a park or, even more apropos, a community in the control of the co

In the immediate vicinity.

It was quite obvious that the good relidents of the Lata Park area, who stormed the City Council meeting Wednesday to protest a $100,000 recreation building project were motivated by their proximity to the park They live close by, and they had Some missapprehensions about (1) expessive noise, (2) traffic congestion, and (3) use of the building by outside adult groups on a rental basis.

What was surprising was that they waited as long to make their protest known. The community-wide recreation program financed by last Summer's million dollar bond issue has been well pub-entirely promote that they havor the project enthusiastically.

At any rate, if worst comes to worst, there are a number of other acreas which would be most happy to have the $100,000 recreation center. Our friends in Dilworth might keep that in mind.

Philadelphia responded to Democratic pleas to "turn the rascals out" and broke a Republican stranglehold on the city gov-ernment by ejecting GOP holders of four key offices. Big city bosses have been an important part of the American political scene for decades. They reached their senith of power under the late President Roosevelt who was not too choosey about his friends so long as they could deliver the votea. As they could deliver the votea of the power of the power than the votea and they would be the power than the votea are getting wise to them.

THAT MARGIN OF ERROR vote was 4,926,325. By Dr. Gallup's calculations, Mr. Lehman should have received 2,808,005 votes and Mr. Dulles 2118,320 — or a margin of 689,685. That would have been a real landside.

DR. OEOROE GALLUP says he has switched from crow and is now eating pheasant. The reason; he picked Herbert Lehman to defeat John Foster Dulles in Tuesday's New York election. But the once-emitient polisier hann't told the whole story.

Shortly after the 1948 national election debacle, when Dr. Oaliup was as wrong as everyone else, he began making changes in his system of sampling public opinion. Convinced he had improved it and narrowed the margin of possible error, he confidently predicted that Mr. Lehman, would receive 57 per cent of the vote and Mr. Dulles 33 per cent.

On the basis of reports from all but 72 of the 9,565 New York precincts, the total

As it was, Mr. Lehman defeated Mr. Dulles by a much smaller margin, 207,061.

He got only 52 per cent of the total vote, and Mr. Dulles grabbed off 48 per cent.

Five percentage points may seem like a small matter, but in election predictions such a margin leaves tremendous possibility of error.

Mr. McKinnell reports that the public this year seems to have understood the fact that the dealers themselves were in no way responsible for the coal shortage and have accepted smaller amounts of coal without grumpling.

He reports also that the remaining ten-to-twelve days of the shortage may be the most difficult for the dealers since buyers may not be able to understand why, since coal is being mined, they cannot buy as much as they want.

much as they want.

The answer is a simple one: it will take a couple of days for the mines to begin actual operations and it will take at least seven days for coal to arrive in Charlotte from the nearest mining point:
