

THOMAS L. ROBINSON Publisher
J. D. DOWD General Manager
G. A. GRUFFERTS Executive Editor
R. A. McHEATH Business Manager

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1950

ACHESON EXPLAINS THE ISSUES

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, in his address last night, contributed materially to better understanding in this nation and abroad of the full meaning of the Chinese aggression in Korea and its terrible implications.

It was the second time, he pointed out, that international Communism has resorted to armed force to attain its objective. It could not gain by infiltration and revolution, the first being the North Korean attack upon South Korea.

THE TERRITORY addressed his remarks to the world. He warned the Americans with to live peacefully, because our free institutions flourish best in an atmosphere of peace.

THAT HOME-BY-CHRISTMAS REMARK

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S explanation of his home-by-Christmas remark still leaves some questions unanswered.

Some of the unanswered questions: Last Friday, just before leaving on a flying trip to the front, MacArthur told his chief commandant: 'Tell the boys when they reach the Yalu, they are going home. I want to make good on my statement that they are going to eat Christmas dinner at home.'

WITH TROUBLED SPIRIT

THE sheer physical proportions of the proposed new atomic energy facility in South Carolina are breathtaking: an initial cost of $240,000,000, occupation of 250,000 acres of land, transfer of 1,800 families, probable expansion of electric power production throughout the Southeast, the building of one or more new cities from the ground up.

The problem is not only for the states of South Carolina and Georgia, but also for the nation. The movement of population, the influx of thousands of workers, the tremendous effect on every phase of the economy will tax the statemanship of the nation.

But even more monumental, to our way of thinking, are the military and moral implications of the new project. Though the Atomic Energy Commission was guarded in its statement, there is every indication that the Allen-Augusta installation will contribute materially to the development of the much talked-of hydrogen bomb.

McCARTHY AT HOME

DURING the recent campaign, there were dispatches telling of the large crowds which greeted Senator McCarthy for campaign speeches in his own State of Wisconsin at the local and state levels.

MacArthur Thrives On Controversy

NO CHARACTER like General Douglas MacArthur has ever before appeared in American history. It may be his long self-imposed service in the East or perhaps it is the peculiar era in which we are living that has called forth this remarkable personality.

He explained to people in all areas of the world the six-point American national foreign policy: support of the United Nations, development of regional organizations within the U. N., a rapid build-up of strength in the free world, economic co-operation, readiness to negotiate on a basis of justice at all times, and a firm adherence to the fundamental principles of our democratic society.

He warned the leaders of Communist China that Moscow is using them as "dupes," and that they are standing before "the bar of judgment of mankind."

He warned the people of the United States that the Communist attack upon South Korea is not against the United States, but against the United Nations. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

NO CHARACTER like General Douglas MacArthur has ever before appeared in American history.

He explained to people in all areas of the world the six-point American national foreign policy: support of the United Nations, development of regional organizations within the U. N., a rapid build-up of strength in the free world, economic co-operation, readiness to negotiate on a basis of justice at all times, and a firm adherence to the fundamental principles of our democratic society.

He warned the leaders of Communist China that Moscow is using them as "dupes," and that they are standing before "the bar of judgment of mankind."

He warned the people of the United States that the Communist attack upon South Korea is not against the United States, but against the United Nations. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea. He said that the United States will support the United Nations in its effort to bring about a cease-fire in Korea.

Translation From The Chinese

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

It reminded me of what a colored neighbor, Anne Belle High, said when I remarked that her husband always was singing when he came into the house. "I trained him that way," I told him it's always safe to let folks know you're in the house.

Truman Must Forget Pride, Woo Congress

AFTER his customary initial reaction for these things, President Truman seems to have settled down to face the post-election facts. At least this is the natural inference from a reliable report that the President will no longer be for the two great symbolic measures of the Fair Deal: the National Health Plan and the Ewing Health Plan.

If Truman had not himself announced that he would continue to carry out the Fair Deal program, without abating one jot or tittle, the abandonment of the Truman and Ewing plan would have no great meaning. All that they would do is to show the obvious political position that even the most ardent and the most ardent of the Truman administration, like Lucas in Illinois, Loveland in Iowa and Campbell in Indiana, had defected against them before election day.

THE PRESIDENT'S decision not to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

In brief, there is only one way for the President to carry out his foreign and defense program, and this is to upset the new balance in Congress. The President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

It is in fact, the President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

It is in fact, the President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

It is in fact, the President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

It is in fact, the President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

It is in fact, the President's decision to carry out the Fair Deal program, none-the-less, for the curious reason that it bears directly on the future of American foreign and domestic policy.

TO BOMB OR NOT TO BOMB

THE latest phase of the controversy between Washington and Tokyo involves the question of whether Communist troop concentrations in Manchuria across the North Korean border should or should not be bombed. MacArthur, in a series of messages to the Pentagon, has complained that he could not be expected to bomb Manchuria unless Communist reinforcements could be moved up from a "privileged position" in the North Korean border.

Yet the dilemma of the commander in the field had a strong bearing on the decision. As Lt. Gen. Edwin A. M. Taylor, chief of staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in a letter to the Pentagon, "The fact that the Chinese are in a position to move up from a 'privileged position' in the North Korean border is a factor which must be taken into account."

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

That, at any rate, is the Navy view. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria. The Navy, it is said, is opposed to the bombing of Manchuria.

Boys Are That Way

(Darlington News & Press) I was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

It was on my first fair at about 8 or 9. It is one of the earliest things I can remember. And its impressions are still fresh.

Another Reason

(Winston-Salem Journal) The fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.

THE fellow who eats a large meal is getting himself in order to have a sense of security and power, according to David Rice, psychologist. Maybe so, but merely being hungry conceivably might have something to do with it.