Guard Question Pondered

40,000 More Draftees Called

WASHINGTON (AP)—The military gave its Army expansion program another boost today with a call for 40,000 more draftees, while at the same time it tried to decide what should be done about the National Guard divisions. Legion Asked To Demand Dean Acheson's Ouster

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A demand that President Truman replace Secretary of State Dean Acheson will be brought before the National American Legion Convention today. This is the top item of the 32nd annual convocation, which resumed business sessions after stalling a unanimous six-hour parade yesterday. The outgoing National Executive Committee has recommended Acheson's dismissal. National Commander George N. Craig has said the State Department chief should go because the American people have lost confidence in him. The proposed resolution, one of a few months more than 970,000 men. That does not include an unspecified, but presumably substantial, number of men in reserve units brought into active duty during the last three months. The Army reported objective under the 2,000,000-man armed force proposed by President Truman is between 1,200,000 and 1,300,000 men. Thus it seems probable the objective can be reached perhaps by next Spring—after training facilities and other physical limitations on the speed of expansion permit. Military officials have emphasized that these are important factors in deciding how fast expansion should proceed.

It is manpower quantity, the Army probably already is close to double the size it was when the Korean war started. It had about 600,000 men last June 25. But a large part of the added manpower needs training and organizing into effective units. Here is what has happened: Four Nations' Guard divisions have been Federalized. Although understrength, their combined manpower probably amounted to about 22,000. Two regimental combat teams from the National Guard were brought out—about 10,000 more. Called to duty were 100,000 national reservists.

man I first heard of the "second Rome" in the spirit. You have, he said, your everyday war—whether in a factory in Detroit or a chicken coop in Africa—work that you must do first and do well, but close to it, there is a "second Rome" which is not your No. 2 job, for which there is no pay except the privilege of going. But in the second job and in our embittered noble chances and find a deep strength, here all our reserve power can be put to work. For what the world lacks most is an atmosphere of "second Rome" which is not your No. 2 job, for which there is no pay except the privilege of going. Without such spiritual adventures, said Schweitzer, the man of duty walks in darkness. He loses himself in an atmosphere of "second Rome" which is not your No. 2 job, for which there is no pay except the privilege of going.
