

Air Force Knocks Out Many Tanks

TOKYO—(AP)—Allied land-based planes destroyed or damaged 1,082 Russian-made tanks during the war in South Korea, the American Air Force Chief in the Far East announced today.

Lt. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer summarized the destruction wrought from the air on the Reds up until Sunday. Then he added: "The war would have been vastly different if we had been up against a major air power."

At no time did the U. N. force consider using the atom bomb, Stratemeyer told a news conference.

BAG LISTED
He said that in 96 days Allied fighters and bombers destroyed 1,069 tanks, 5,233 trucks, 239 Jeeps, 874 railroad cars, 276 bridges, 152 oil storage tanks, and 32 parachuting tanks which were used to transport 11,000 troops and 300,000 supplies.

ATTACKS CONTINUE
The North Korean Red targets were virtually erased. Allied planes are continuing attacks aimed at cutting off communications behind the retreating Communists. A bomb-line stretches across the peninsula—most of the 38th parallel. "We're going to keep the bomb-line ahead of our troops," Stratemeyer said when asked to comment on South Korean forces fighting the North Korean Red army.

YAKS DESTROYED
He did not mention Russia, but said the source of supply didn't fit to provide a larger air force for the North Korean invaders. The enemy planes destroyed were mostly Russian-made Yak fighters.
