

THOMAS L. ROBINSON, Publisher
J. E. DOWD, General Manager
B. S. GRIFPITH, Executive Editor
C. A. MCKINTY, Editor

TUESDAY, MAY 30, 1930

GRAHAM BARDEN GETS NEW JOB

THE chairman of a Congressional committee is a pretty important fellow. If he approves a bill, he can speed it along...

For that reason, the advocates of liberal labor laws and of Federal aid to education are pretty gloomy over the death of Rep. Lestand...

The Washington Post says that the 54-year-old Tar Heel is regarded as a "progressive" by Southern standards, a "conservative" by Fair Deal standards...

1. Pro-labor members of the committee have held a thin 13-12 majority on the committee, with Barden generally in the minority...

WEEDING OUT THE PERENNIALS

IN 1924 of the State's 1,990 precincts, 1,622.15 were cast. Olla Ray Boyd got 5,865 or nine-tenths of one per cent of the total vote.

With all but a few precincts reported, 42,906 votes were cast in the Tenth Congressional District...

Complete returns showed 24,046 votes cast in Mecklenburg County in the State Senate race. Manley Dunaway got 2,832 of them, or 11.7 per cent of the total.

In England a candidate for Parliament has to pay a stiff filing fee—£420 in American money. If he fails to poll one-eighth, or 12.5 per cent of the vote...

CULTURE IS CATCHING

WE WOULD NOT claim for North Carolina the distinction of being the state most concerned with things cultural. There are plenty of Tar Heels who don't know a Gregorian chant from a boy's chorus.

In one sense the orchestra is perpetuating itself by its concentration on youthful audiences. These children will be the supporters of the orchestra in the future...

Under Dr. Benjamin Swalin the orchestra traveled 7,000 miles in the recent 105-day tour, playing 130 concerts.

BERTIE AND THE UNITED NATIONS

COL. BERTIE MCCORMICK, publisher of The Chicago Tribune, says that anybody who speaks up for the United Nations is either a Communist or uninformed.

The imperious Bertie dismisses them all as either uninformed or Communist. He said that when Albert Owen wrote more than a century ago...

Mr. Green (AP) says higher wages and lower prices would be sound economic. So he will pay his organizers more and charge his members less—Dollis (Tz.) Morning News.

Overhead in drug store: "Have you anything that's good for mosquito bites on top of poison ivy—over sunburn?"—Ferdinand (Fiz.) News Leader.

A metropolitan newspaper says editorially: "This is no time for apathy, this is no time for hysteria..."

That's the Verdict Is Returned

There is no appeal from the verdict of the people. On Saturday the people of North Carolina went to the polls to re-elect their representatives in State and local elections...

At this writing the total number of ballots cast in the Senatorial race is in excess of 600,000. That is nearly 100,000 better than the previous record for Democratic primaries...

The only possibility of a second contest—a runoff primary—appears to be in the race for the seat now held by U. S. Senator Frank P. Graham.

It is now midnight—just about the latest anybody has ever had to stay up for the United States Senate.

Senator Frank Graham has a commanding lead at this moment—his margin has been estimated at the slightest doubt that he will be far in the lead of Willis Smith—both in the vote and in the writing...

On several occasions we have written that if Graham led by not more than half of the total Reynolds and Boyd vote...

The bitter fact—in fact, it is at least—-is that Graham ran a better race, or Smith and Reynolds ran a worse race—than we had expected.

WHAT can be said in happy contemplation of Saturday's voting is that it brought out the largest number of voters in the history of the State.

A reasonable conclusion, growing out of study of the returns, is that the State has not yet reached a point where it is necessary to have a runoff election.

In TWO RESPECTS the State primary Saturday for the nomination of a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate was a record.

It brought out the largest number of voters in the history of primary elections in North Carolina.

It produced the largest number of voters in the history of North Carolina in a generation. In fact, the record will prove, we believe, that there was no other election in the State in which so many voters have been waded in this Commonwealth.

At this writing, it appears probable that Senator Graham's plurality in the race will be 50,000. That is a tremendous lead for a candidate to have in a four-year term in the Senate.

Nothing like this ever before has occurred in North Carolina. The largest primary vote in the history of the State was cast in the election of 1918, when Senator How led Dr. McDonald in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The people of North Carolina will be proud of the size of this vote. It shows that democracy is still a living force in the State.

It is a record that will be remembered for many years to come. It is a record that will be a great relief to a vast majority of the people of this State.

Most important job act passed by Dean Acheson during the Big Three conference was at a private Lancaster house in London.

Before talking to Berlin, Acheson had been in Paris the day before, where he had met with the French Foreign Minister, Schuman, and had expressed the fear that the British would be opposed.

Personalities sometimes play a big part in mousing the peace of the world. One personal factor regarding the Big Three conference was the fact that Acheson had been in London.

Mr. Green (AP) says higher wages and lower prices would be sound economic. So he will pay his organizers more and charge his members less—Dollis (Tz.) Morning News.

Overhead in drug store: "Have you anything that's good for mosquito bites on top of poison ivy—over sunburn?"—Ferdinand (Fiz.) News Leader.

A metropolitan newspaper says editorially: "This is no time for apathy, this is no time for hysteria..."

WHAT can be said in happy contemplation of Saturday's voting is that it brought out the largest number of voters in the history of the State.

A reasonable conclusion, growing out of study of the returns, is that the State has not yet reached a point where it is necessary to have a runoff election.

In TWO RESPECTS the State primary Saturday for the nomination of a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate was a record.

It brought out the largest number of voters in the history of primary elections in North Carolina.

It produced the largest number of voters in the history of North Carolina in a generation. In fact, the record will prove, we believe, that there was no other election in the State in which so many voters have been waded in this Commonwealth.

At this writing, it appears probable that Senator Graham's plurality in the race will be 50,000. That is a tremendous lead for a candidate to have in a four-year term in the Senate.

Nothing like this ever before has occurred in North Carolina. The largest primary vote in the history of the State was cast in the election of 1918, when Senator How led Dr. McDonald in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The people of North Carolina will be proud of the size of this vote. It shows that democracy is still a living force in the State.

It is a record that will be remembered for many years to come. It is a record that will be a great relief to a vast majority of the people of this State.

Graham's Great Lead

It is now midnight—just about the latest anybody has ever had to stay up for the United States Senate.

Senator Frank Graham has a commanding lead at this moment—his margin has been estimated at the slightest doubt that he will be far in the lead of Willis Smith—both in the vote and in the writing...

On several occasions we have written that if Graham led by not more than half of the total Reynolds and Boyd vote...

The bitter fact—in fact, it is at least—-is that Graham ran a better race, or Smith and Reynolds ran a worse race—than we had expected.

WHAT can be said in happy contemplation of Saturday's voting is that it brought out the largest number of voters in the history of the State.

A reasonable conclusion, growing out of study of the returns, is that the State has not yet reached a point where it is necessary to have a runoff election.

In TWO RESPECTS the State primary Saturday for the nomination of a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate was a record.

It brought out the largest number of voters in the history of primary elections in North Carolina.

It produced the largest number of voters in the history of North Carolina in a generation. In fact, the record will prove, we believe, that there was no other election in the State in which so many voters have been waded in this Commonwealth.

At this writing, it appears probable that Senator Graham's plurality in the race will be 50,000. That is a tremendous lead for a candidate to have in a four-year term in the Senate.

Nothing like this ever before has occurred in North Carolina. The largest primary vote in the history of the State was cast in the election of 1918, when Senator How led Dr. McDonald in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The people of North Carolina will be proud of the size of this vote. It shows that democracy is still a living force in the State.

It is a record that will be remembered for many years to come. It is a record that will be a great relief to a vast majority of the people of this State.

Most important job act passed by Dean Acheson during the Big Three conference was at a private Lancaster house in London.

Before talking to Berlin, Acheson had been in Paris the day before, where he had met with the French Foreign Minister, Schuman, and had expressed the fear that the British would be opposed.

Personalities sometimes play a big part in mousing the peace of the world. One personal factor regarding the Big Three conference was the fact that Acheson had been in London.

Mr. Green (AP) says higher wages and lower prices would be sound economic. So he will pay his organizers more and charge his members less—Dollis (Tz.) Morning News.

Overhead in drug store: "Have you anything that's good for mosquito bites on top of poison ivy—over sunburn?"—Ferdinand (Fiz.) News Leader.

A metropolitan newspaper says editorially: "This is no time for apathy, this is no time for hysteria..."

WHAT can be said in happy contemplation of Saturday's voting is that it brought out the largest number of voters in the history of the State.

A reasonable conclusion, growing out of study of the returns, is that the State has not yet reached a point where it is necessary to have a runoff election.

In TWO RESPECTS the State primary Saturday for the nomination of a Democratic candidate for the United States Senate was a record.

It brought out the largest number of voters in the history of primary elections in North Carolina.

It produced the largest number of voters in the history of North Carolina in a generation. In fact, the record will prove, we believe, that there was no other election in the State in which so many voters have been waded in this Commonwealth.

At this writing, it appears probable that Senator Graham's plurality in the race will be 50,000. That is a tremendous lead for a candidate to have in a four-year term in the Senate.

Nothing like this ever before has occurred in North Carolina. The largest primary vote in the history of the State was cast in the election of 1918, when Senator How led Dr. McDonald in the race for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

The people of North Carolina will be proud of the size of this vote. It shows that democracy is still a living force in the State.

It is a record that will be remembered for many years to come. It is a record that will be a great relief to a vast majority of the people of this State.

Most important job act passed by Dean Acheson during the Big Three conference was at a private Lancaster house in London.

Before talking to Berlin, Acheson had been in Paris the day before, where he had met with the French Foreign Minister, Schuman, and had expressed the fear that the British would be opposed.

Personalities sometimes play a big part in mousing the peace of the world. One personal factor regarding the Big Three conference was the fact that Acheson had been in London.

Mr. Green (AP) says higher wages and lower prices would be sound economic. So he will pay his organizers more and charge his members less—Dollis (Tz.) Morning News.

Overhead in drug store: "Have you anything that's good for mosquito bites on top of poison ivy—over sunburn?"—Ferdinand (Fiz.) News Leader.

Saving On Mental Treatment May Become False Economy

WASHINGTON Federal aid can greatly accelerate this process. That is why a number of eminent doctors and psychiatrists before both Senate and House committees...

The House did step it up by nearly $5,000,000. But at this point the money drive intervened. The House had voted to increase the appropriation for cancer research...

It happens that Congress not so long ago passed a river and harbor bill filled to the brim with research projects for this creek and that harbor added to many more of the above...

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.

To deny a small extra margin for research is to deny the most important step in the discovery of the causes of mental illness.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary results. It is an investment in the health of the nation, in the happiness and well-being of the people.