THE NATION'S ECONOMY

TWO MAJOR points underlie the President's economic message yesterday. Inflation is under control—for the time being, at least. Pay-as-you-go financing is out the window—for the time being at least.

ing, at least. Payasyou-go financing is outthe window—for the time being at least.

The belief that inflation is in uneary check is shared by many conomist, inside and central the property of the conomist, for the
and scare production which go tunder way in late 1850, leveled off. Merchants found themselves with large inventiories and cut prices. Consumers essed 6ff on scare purchasing and put inhe per cent of their earnings into asvings. While prices as a whole were stabilized, wages went up five per pent.
Corporate, farm and personal income increased substantially, although increased taxes more than offset the income hike, at least in the case of corporations.

These increased taxes, of course, largely went into security expenditures. Since the start of the Korean War our security outlays has increased from $17$ to $45$ billion. A year from now annual expenditure will probably be-685 billion, eighteen per cent of all production.

Wet and billion increases arruparked for se-

all production.

With $20 billion more earmarked for security—in an election year—it is easy to see how the pay-ac-you op philosophy got sidetracked. Of course, some accommists point to our budget surplus during some years since the war, and the possibility of dimitishing security expenditure in 1854, thus beliancing the budget over an eight-year period. The catch is, we might be spending even more for armmements in 1954.

NO ROOM FOR THE KLAN

THE grim story of Ku Klux Klan night riders and the reign of terror they have established in Columbus County should arouse the anger and indignation of every law-abiding citizen in North Carolina.

HOEY AND SMITH SEE ALIKE

IF OUR MEMORY serves us right, North Carolina's junior Senator, Willis Smith, promised his supporters before going to Washington that he would "walk hand in hand" with old-timer Clyde R. Hoey. He has largely kept his pledge.

Congressional Quarterly reports that the two Tar Heel Senators agreed 88 per cent of the time when both voted on the 202 roll call before the Senate in 1901. They voted together 131 times and divided their votes 22 times. Their percentage of disagreement for 1901 thus was 14.

The Washington fact-finding agency breaks own the vote into these categories:

Taxes and Economic Policy; agreed on 50 otes and disagreed on five.

Appropriations Measures: 'agreed 36 imes, disagreed nine times.

From The Easley Rotery News

At least the first of the two major 1902 goods set by the President, a five per cent boost in sational output, should be easily displarable. The year 1901 saw an eight per compared to the production as compared to 1900 hour in the production were forged.

The President size wants conther one and encoded the production workers are unemployed, and seasonal employment and plant changeovers will presentably keep us from fully utilizing the entire labor force all the time.

The President is unlikely to find much Congressional support for his request for some tax boots, although some of the loop-holes he asked be plugged certainly deserve attention. The 1901 tax law was overly lenient with various pressure groups in permitting excessive percentage depletion* for oil and coal operators, juggling the family partnership and corporation reorganization tax laws.

The President soundly advocated cutbacks in automobile. Av sets, river and harbor appropriations. But he should have gone much control was constructed to the production, seems to be booming along—but under centrel. We can and must expect cutbacks of civilian goods and continued heavy taxs. These inconveniences—they cannot truly be called hardships—are much more desirable than a bandoning worldwide commitments or allowing inflation to take over.

ENTHUSIASTIC AMATEURS

IN ONE respect, the initial like-for-President I rally here Tuesday right was lightly encouraging. Despite little advance publicity and no haltyhoo, more than 80 haterested persons assembled at the Courthouse to relater their support of Eissenhower. In the gathering were Republican, Democrats and non-registered voters, and they all wanted to know what they coild do it. In that sense, the meeting reflected whater aution. The people want to rally behind some leader of outstanding ability and unquestioned intagrity, a main whe will be able to restore the dignity of the Presidency and carry out his duties with support of a majorlity. The eagerness and enthusiasm of those attending the rally was reassuring evidence that the voters are aroused in this election year, and that they don't intend for the nominations or the election to go by default. In another respect, the rally was discourley. The eagerness and enthusiasm of those attending the respect, the rally was discourley. FUNCTIONAL CHAIRS (An Editorial from the Louisville Courier-Journal)

(An Editorial from the Louisville Courier-Journal)

A samed for William Morris, we look with despening disfavor upon

A samed for William Morris, we look with despening disfavor upon the persistence of the iron-pine and string school of chair designers.

We had hoped that these people would tire sooner or later of "a vast sublic indifference to their angular perches. But the furnitum exact and the academies of modern design, now releasing their hopeful prophecies for the year, are filled again with these nasty objects that look like trifles from a museum of Inquisition torture devices.

The chairs, tables and what-nots of this plywood and piping school of design are called functional. But what is their function? It is not surely, to sustain and cushion the human form, or at least any human form that ever came under our eye. Neither is it to add happiness form that ever came under our eye. Neither is it to add happiness and permanence to the six-room ranch house or four-room flat that houses most of us these days. We must conclude that most of them are originated by designers for the waiting rooms of dentities or public relations men or for the offices of other furniture designers. In these settings, where comfort is of minor concern and furnishings are used for their secondary purpose of distracting the mind and supplying conversation, we don't object too much to the eccentric chair and table.

But be on your guard, men! The people who fore off your front porch and gave you the pittless exposure of that picture window, are ever on the alert. One sign of weakening, one feeble smile in the direction of a leopard-akin hammock alung on three spikes, and the battle will be lost.
