

"To Give the News Impartially,
Without Fear or Favor"

Chattanooga Times Free Press

Tristate Weather
CITY— and slightly warmer today.
LITTLE change in temperature today.
TUESDAY— with light rain.
GEORGIA— partly cloudy with light rain.
ALABAMA— mostly cloudy with a light shower.
Full Weather Report on Page 5.

VOL. XCI, NO. 337.

Second-Class Mail Privileges Authorized
at Chattanooga, Tennessee

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., MONDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1960.

★ ★ ★

PRICE: 7 CENTS

TURK STRONG MAN SHAKES UP REGIME BY DISMISSING 14 Gen. Gursel Fires Several Junta Members in Move to Aid 'Democracy' AS ASKED BY MILITARY Potential Candidate for National Leadership Is Among Those Missing

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)— Gen. Cemal Gursel fired 14 members of Turkey's ruling military junta and made some new appointments Sunday in a shakeup he said would lead to the establishment of democratic procedures.

The shakeup, the biggest since the revolutionary overthrow of Premier Adnan Menderes last May, was regarded as a triumph for moderate elements in the military regime.

The 65-year-old general, who has served as Turkey's chief of state since the fall of Menderes, announced the dismissals in this statement: "At the request of the Turkish armed forces, I have abolished the old National Unity Committee and organized a new one. As soon as possible the new National Unity Committee and a constituent assembly will begin work to establish democratic procedures in the country."

Heads New Committee
Gursel heads the list of 23 officers who make up the new committee, which is Turkey's supreme ruling body.

The biggest name missing from the new roster is that of Col. Akbar Tanrioverdi, a brilliant professional soldier often regarded as a potential candidate for the national leadership.

Among those named to the new committee is Maj. Gen. Celal Madanoğlu, a non-military professional soldier who is recognized as a moderate middle road and highly esteemed in the armed forces.

In making his announcement Gursel said: "The activity of the old National Unity Committee has assumed a state endangering the higher interests of the country. I have abolished it at the request of the armed forces."

In Retirement
Gursel declared that no one other than the chief of state himself — was empowered to make any further announcement on the developments. He said that the members of the old committee who have been excused are now retired.

Telephones at the homes of some of those dismissed officers did not respond to persistent calls Sunday. There has been no definite word whether they might be under detention.

Major government buildings and installations in Ankara and Istanbul were under navy, air force and army guards. Air force jets flew in sunny skies over Istanbul and Ankara.

The nation, however, was reported entirely calm Sunday according to reports from Ankara.

TURKISH SHIP SINKS Freighter, German Vessel Collide in Fog

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP)— The 3,115-ton Turkish steamer Kuzatshy, sank Sunday after a collision in the fog with a German ship near the Dutch island of Ameland. All aboard were saved.

The Kuzatshy's crew of 38 and a lone passenger were taken aboard the German ship Spreewald and later were landed at Terzelling Island off Dutch coast.

The Spreewald was badly holed but continued toward its destination, Antwerp.

Kemal Omur, captain of the Turkish vessel, said his ship sank within half an hour of the collision. It was found for Bremen from Antwerp with 700 tons of cotton.

In Today's Times

- Page
- Amusements 11-19
- Classified Ads 11-19
- Crossword 14
- Cosmos 14
- Crossword Puzzle 14
- Editorials 14
- Farm Page 15
- Local News 16
- Obituaries 16
- Radio and TV Programs 16
- Sports and Clubs 16
- Special News 11-15
- Tristate News 16
- Weather Report 16
- Woman's Page 17

NAVY DEVELOPING 2 NEW TECHNIQUES FOR SPACE FIRING Lossing of Rockets From Planes, Ships or Under Water Is Goal

By JOHN W. FINNEY
© New York Times News Service
WASHINGTON—The Navy is developing two new space launching techniques which promise to give the United States and other nations a low-cost method of launching satellites from almost any place on earth.

One technique involves launching the satellite rocket from an airplane. In the other, the launching rocket would be fired from a ship, barge or even from underwater.

As seen by Navy developers, both techniques would offer the significant advantage of giving a mobility to space launches which would give the present dependence on such costly launching sites as Cape Canaveral, Fla., and would let satellites be placed readily into any desired orbit around the earth.

Furthermore, the two techniques could be used to extend a space launching capability to any other nation desiring to enter the space field. With the airplane launched in a broad particular, the cost would be so low as to be well within the reach of any nation.

Funds Expected
In next year's military budget, the Navy expects to have funds to convert a ship—probably a seaplane tender—into a rocket launcher.

The Navy concept is to launch the space rocket from either the deck of the ship or from the deck of the aircraft carrier, in much the same way that the Polaris missile is fired from one of the Polaris submarines.

Or, as a later alternative, the rocket would be fired from a barge towed to the launching point.

The seaborne launching rocket, called the Sea Scout, would be built around the two-stage solid-fueled Scout missile. On top of the missile, to give it an orbiting capability, would be placed two of the upper stage rockets developed for the agency's solid-fueled Scout launching rocket.

The four-stage rocket is expected to be able to place payloads weighing 100 pounds or more into orbit.

The ship-based platform is viewed in the Navy as one answer to the oft-discussed need for an equatorial launching site which would be able to capitalize on the rotation of the earth to place a satellite into orbit.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

ART OUT OF CHINA SMUGGLED TO U.S. SEIZED BY AGENTS Value of Items Is Placed at $400,000—Trading With Reds Illegal

By JOHN W. FINNEY
© New York Times News Service
NEW YORK (AP)—The Treasury Department disclosed Sunday it has seized more than $400,000 worth of Chinese art objects that were smuggled into the country from Red China.

The department said two dealers, Frank Caro of New York and Charles L. Dose of Berkeley, Calif., cooperated with the government in an investigation which began three months ago.

Among the objects seized were a 12th century "Birds and Flowers" scroll worth $35,000; a bronze turret, said to date from the Sixth Century B.C. and valued at $30,000, and a silk screen painted by the Emperor Heuy Tzing in the 13th Century, worth $65,000.

The scroll, the Treasury spokesman said, had been sold to the Boston Museum, while other smuggled objects were found in the Cleveland Museum and the Freer Gallery in Washington, D.C.

Hong Kong Dealer
The government got on to the smuggling operation, he said, when agents learned that a millionaire Hong Kong dealer and collector, H. S. Lo, had been dealing with persons in this country.

Trade with Communist China has been forbidden since 1959 under a provision of the trading-with-the-enemy act.

Learning that Chen was dealing with Caro, agents followed Caro aboard a plane flight from California to New York and questioned him aboard the plane. They said Caro told them he had not been connected with the smuggling.

The seizures were disclosed by E. E. Minickoff, chief of the Treasury Department's foreign assets control division. He did not say how the art treasures got to Hong Kong.

He said art objects worth an estimated $282,000 were seized in a bank vault under his name in Co. Corp., which is owned by Minickoff.

In California
Objects worth $75,000 were confiscated in the San Francisco area, and others worth $66,000 in the Los Angeles area, Minickoff said.

Man named Yang was arrested in Los Angeles and charged with trading with the enemy after the bronze turret and Chinese screens were found in a bank vault under his name.

No charges have been made so far against the two dealers. Minickoff said an unidentified number of smuggled Chinese art objects are under a doubtfully in other museums and collections in this country.

All such objects, when identified, will be confiscated, he added.

Minickoff said Chen had been engaged in smuggling art from China for 18 months, and recently switched from the California dealer to Caro when he became dissatisfied with Caro.

See Page Two, Column Five
The ship-based platform is viewed in the Navy as one answer to the oft-discussed need for an equatorial launching site which would be able to capitalize on the rotation of the earth to place a satellite into orbit.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

LOUISIANA ORDERS SCHOOLS' SEIZURE; JUDGE ISSUES WRIT Kennedy, in Harmony Bid, To Meet With foe Today Has 2 Objectives in Arranging to See Nixon in Key Biscayne—Possible Offer of Post to Vice President Isn't Ruled Out

By W. H. LAWRENCE
© New York Times News Service
PALM BEACH, Fla.—President Kennedy might ask Nixon to accept a role in the new administration which takes office unity Sunday by arranging to meet Monday with Vice President Nixon, his defeated rival for the presidency.

The winner will fly to meet the loser at his post-election vacation retreat on Key Biscayne, an island 10 miles southwest of Miami.

As the victor, Kennedy took the initiative for the conference by telephoning the vice president Saturday night.

The meeting was set for 11:30 a.m. EST Monday in a villa on the grounds of the Key Biscayne Hotel.

On a normally quiet Sunday Salinger also made some other news of the Kennedy progress toward formulating major policy programs of his new administration. These included: He will lunch on Tuesday with Gov. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut, who presumably can have a Cabinet post if he wants one or who may prefer to await a vacancy on the Supreme Court.

Salinger carefully did not exclude the possibility that Kennedy will ask Nixon to accept a role in the new administration which takes office unity Sunday by arranging to meet Monday with Vice President Nixon, his defeated rival for the presidency.

Truman Says Free World Will Have Dynamic Leader

By HARRY S. TRUMAN
North American Newspaper Alliance
The free world has every reason to take heart at the decision of the American people to choose John F. Kennedy as their new president.

I believe that not only our own people but people everywhere can expect a new surge of dynamic, decisive leadership from this country. For one thing we are about to have a president in the White House together with a working majority in Congress who will long to the same political party.

Historically, the margin of victory a candidate for president gains under our system of government is of little importance. When a president is elected, he automatically has a mandate from all the people and he becomes the president of all the people, regardless of the size of his victory or the distribution of the popular or electoral votes which put him in office.

Last week, two of our greatest presidents were elected for their first terms by a minority of the popular vote, although they had a majority of the electoral votes. They were Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson.

This point needs to be made perfectly clear because there are some who seem to believe that although Kennedy received a majority of the popular vote, he failed to get a mandate from the people because of the narrow margin of his popular majority. He was elected by a majority and is the president of the United States.

As a matter of fact, Kennedy actually received not only a greater number of votes than his principal opponent, but also a majority of the electoral vote.

Every four years a hue and cry is raised in some quarters about the seeming anachronism of the mechanics of the electoral college, and the need for abolishing it—leaving the election of the president to the popular vote in the nation.

I think it would be a mistake to attempt the election of the president to the popular vote in the nation. The electoral college may seem more ceremonial than useful. But as a matter of fact it is one of the most important checks and balances we have to keep the larger states and the concentrated industrial populations from ever nullifying the role and influence of the states with sparse populations. This is the government of the United States—50 sovereign states.

As it stands today, no combination of the larger states can ever elect a president who is not elected by a majority of the people.

See Page Two, Column Five
The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

28 U.S. Governors, Wives Commence Argentine Visit

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP)—Twenty-eight U.S. governors and their wives arrived Sunday for a sightseeing and business visit that may also signal the start of a new era in inter-American relations.

The state executives were invited to Argentina as official guests to participate in this year's celebrations of the 150th anniversary of Argentina's independence from Spain.

They will leave for Brazil on Nov. 20 to spend eight days there and return to New York Nov. 25.

The governors got a red-carpet welcome in Buenos Aires. They walked under a specially built arch decked with the flags of the 21 American republics. A long line of shiny limousines awaited them. Each car had a special plate naming the governor. It was assigned to and his state.

Interior Minister Alfredo Yrigoyen, who is top political adviser to President Arturo Frondizi, and Gov. Oscar Alende of Buenos Aires province headed the welcoming dignitaries.

However, not all eyes were on the governors throughout. Actress Jane Russell arrived on the same Argentine airliner, to the delight of photographers and many of the airport crowd.

"It came here to make a night club appearance," Miss Russell explained. "I just managed to get a ride in this plane."

Before leaving New York Saturday night one of the governors, Stephen L. McNichols of Colorado, announced he was carrying a message from President-elect John F. Kennedy.

McNichols said Kennedy told him by telephone he wants Latin Americans to know he is "looking forward to a vigorous re-establishment of the good neighbor policy as it was understood under the terms of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

There should be some opportunity to spread this message. The governors, 15 Democrats and 13 Republicans, will meet officials and business and labor leaders, although the emphasis is on sightseeing as promotion for Argentina's tourist industry.

Among the resorts they will visit are the seaside towns of Mar del Plata and the mountain resort of San Carlos de Bariloche where President Eisenhower stayed during his South American tour earlier this year.

Governors of all 50 states had been invited and 35 accepted, plus the governors of the territories of Guam, American Samoa, and the Virgin Islands.

Bonn to Grant $1 Billion in Aid

By SYDNEY GRUBSON
© New York Times News Service
BONN—Under American provision, the West German government has drawn up a foreign-aid program for 1961 that goes far beyond anything ever done by this country and beyond anything contemplated only a few weeks ago.

As finally agreed upon by the key ministries and industrial leaders, the program is expected here to meet Washington's insistence that the booming German economy take over a substantial share of the load being carried by U.S. leading states.

NAVY DEVELOPING 2 NEW TECHNIQUES FOR SPACE FIRING

Lossing of Rockets From Planes, Ships or Under Water Is Goal

By JOHN W. FINNEY
© New York Times News Service
WASHINGTON—The Navy is developing two new space launching techniques which promise to give the United States and other nations a low-cost method of launching satellites from almost any place on earth.

One technique involves launching the satellite rocket from an airplane. In the other, the launching rocket would be fired from a ship, barge or even from underwater.

As seen by Navy developers, both techniques would offer the significant advantage of giving a mobility to space launches which would give the present dependence on such costly launching sites as Cape Canaveral, Fla., and would let satellites be placed readily into any desired orbit around the earth.

Furthermore, the two techniques could be used to extend a space launching capability to any other nation desiring to enter the space field. With the airplane launched in a broad particular, the cost would be so low as to be well within the reach of any nation.

Funds Expected
In next year's military budget, the Navy expects to have funds to convert a ship—probably a seaplane tender—into a rocket launcher.

The Navy concept is to launch the space rocket from either the deck of the ship or from the deck of the aircraft carrier, in much the same way that the Polaris missile is fired from one of the Polaris submarines.

Or, as a later alternative, the rocket would be fired from a barge towed to the launching point.

The seaborne launching rocket, called the Sea Scout, would be built around the two-stage solid-fueled Scout missile. On top of the missile, to give it an orbiting capability, would be placed two of the upper stage rockets developed for the agency's solid-fueled Scout launching rocket.

The four-stage rocket is expected to be able to place payloads weighing 100 pounds or more into orbit.

The ship-based platform is viewed in the Navy as one answer to the oft-discussed need for an equatorial launching site which would be able to capitalize on the rotation of the earth to place a satellite into orbit.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

BOARD IS DEFIANT Set to Open New Orleans Institutions Today in Spite of Lawmakers 5 NEGROES ARE ISSUE Wright's Fiat Bars State Interference—Davis Makes TV Plea

BATON ROUGE (AP)— Federal Dist. Judge J. Skelly Wright Sunday night signed a restraining order preventing any state interference with the scheduled integration of New Orleans public schools on Monday.

The order, signed in New Orleans, was directed — among others — against Gov. Jimmie H. Davis, members of the Louisiana Legislature, the state police and State Dept. of Education officials in Jackson.

The order came soon after the Legislature, with Davis' leaders in complete control, framed through resolutions which gave the Legislature control over the Orleans Parish (city) school board.

Lloyd J. Rittiner, president of the Orleans Parish school board, said the New Orleans public schools would open Monday. He urged all parents to send their children to school and asked that all employees report as usual.

"We expect to have a normal school tomorrow," Rittiner added. Davis, who already was under federal orders not to interfere with the New Orleans integration, meanwhile made a statewide television address urging parents to continue sending their children "to the same schools they have been attending." The address had been taped before Judge Wright's latest order was signed.

Marshall on Scene
Thurgood Marshall of New York, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said in New Orleans the five Negro girls scheduled to start public school integration Monday will "go to school as planned."

Marshall, in his TV address, said he could not agree with a U.S. Supreme Court decision outlawing separate but equal schools in the law of the land.

The U.S. constitution makes no reference to a system of public education, Davis said, and the only way to amend the constitution is by the people with ratification by the legislatures.

"Any other course is extralegal," Davis said. "This is the official position of the State of Louisiana."

There was little opposition as Davis leaders guided the segregationist program through the House and Senate.

The key measure, calling for legislative operation of the New Orleans public schools, won 24-18 in the House and 66-32 in the Senate after 87-14 approval in the House.

The three-part program, sent immediately to the Senate, was contained in resolutions calling for: 1. Putting the entire 140-member Legislature in control of the $100 million New Orleans public school system. Orleans Parish school board members are scheduled to start the first grade of two New Orleans white schools Monday.

2. Dismissal of Dr. James F. Ledford, a superintendent of Orleans Parish public schools and New Orleans Public Schools and New Orleans Public Schools and New Orleans Public Schools.

See Page Nine, Column Five
The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.

Group of 100
The uprising began when a group of officers under arrest at Fort Matamoros, in the capital, killed a colonel and a captain on the fort's staff and escaped, taking with them some troops and arms.

The government announced Sunday morning that it had put down the revolt by disaffected officers. But later the Guatemalan air force went into action against rebel forces in the northeastern part of the country.

A decree imposing a state of siege, a modified form of martial law, was approved at a meeting of President Ydigoras and his cabinet at the president's suburban home here.