Send In A New Team To Probe FCC

virtue Nothing the principals in this controversy can say—or shout, as has been the custom during the past 48 hours—can repair the damage done, Reckless charges and countercharges have been laid unevaluated before the public. Dr. Bernard Schwartz, the committee's counsel, has been summarily dismissed after preparing a memorandum imputing criminal conduct to FCC members. Rep. Moulder. (DAJO) has himself residend his post as the subcommittee's chairman. Individual committeemen and Dr. Schwartz himself have encaged in a shocking contest of backbiting and personal abuse.

The impetuosity exhibited on all sides has left the public with nothing but the darkest doubt.

There is but one sensible course of action now. That is for the subcommittee to be discharged post haste and for another to be appointed in its place by Chairman Harris (P-Ark) of the parent House Commerce Committee.

By word and deed the present subcommittee has disqualified itself. It is not fit to continue the investigation. It has embarrassed both political parties and smudged the dignity of the House of Representatives. Any belated attempt to mend its manners now would necessarily be subject to widespread suspicion.

U. S. Should Condemn French Atrocity

SECRETARY DULLES' meek response to French destruction of a Tunisian town and slaughter of its inhabitants was a pitful thing.

It may be argued that Mr. Dulles is in a pitful no sostion, trying to ride simultaneously the two horses of French colonialism and Arab nationalism. But by trying to sympathize with the victim without offending the attacker, the secretary managed to make the U.S. appear insensitive to the commission of an indefensible atrocity. Some crimes cry out for condemnation. The destruction of Sakiet-Sidi Yussef was one of these crimes. The cruelty of the attack was matched only by its stunidity. Its object, if it had one, was to put an end to the harboring in Tunistan villages of reboles from a first the property of the state of the property of the property their effort to drive the French from Algeria.

France's insistence on playing the role of a great power when it has lost both the power and prestige of that position is putting an unbearable strain on U.S. understanding. Americans cannot continue to supply the arms France is using aggressively against innocent people. The cost in conscience and in friendship with the uncommitted nations is too high.

Are 'Backward' Youths Worth Helping?

IT is suddenly very fashionable in academic circles to take a dim view of "backward" students who do not respond easily to the crash program in education. For instance, Dr Walter Orr Roberts, director of the Colorado University Observatory, says that four out of five students at the university should be flunked out and sent home. He wishes the faculty had the courage to do it. We're all for lofty standards at institutions of higher learning but haste makes waste in education as it does in anything else. After all, the job of the
