Skies Drip, So Does Coliseum

By EMERY WISTER
News Staff Writer

With rain flooding the Charlotte Coliseum during practically every summer storm, repair of the wind-wrecked roof still may be weeks or even months away.

Yesterday the rains came down in sheets and gave the coliseum interior one of its biggest unscheduled bathings. Coliseum Manager Paul Buck said the water is causing little damage but said the rains showered down on the electric lights, causing one to blow out.

Aluminum to replace that blown off in the June 15 storm has been ordered, but production of the material has not begun.

J. L. Zaccagnini, vice president of the Fred N. Thompson Co., which held the general construction contract for the coliseum and auditorium, said today

Auto Contract Talks Resumed

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers and the auto industry's Big Three return to the bargaining table today.

Negotiations for new contracts at Ford, General Motors and Chrysler resume in an atmosphere laden with questions.

Chief among them were the continuing effect of the recession and the role to be played by the industry's backlog of unused 1958 model cars.

Presumably, the UAW and the companies were starting out virtually all over again from the point they stood at in late March when these negotiations first began.

There had been no serious concession from either side up to the time the auto contracts expired during the Memorial Day weekend. The companies have continued operations without contracts.

Today's talks followed upon an extended Fourth of July recess period in which there had been no signs of progress toward agreements.

Two Cases Probed

Davidson County Site Of Robberies

LEXINGTON (AP)—Sheriff's officers are investigating two highway robberies which occurred in Davidson County overnight.

In one, a Winston-Salem taxicab driver reported he was robbed of about $12 and beaten by three Negro men before he escaped. They chased him back toward Winston-Salem in a high-speed automobile race.

In the other, a Richmond, Va. man reported he was robbed of $200 in cash, a $200 wrist watch and an expensive camera by a hitchhiker dressed in a Marine uniform.

The cab driver, a 6-foot, 200-pound man, was employed at Blue Bird Clubs in Winston-Salem, said Davidson County sheriff's officers, that he picked up a Negro fare in Winston-Salem shortly after midnight.

The man wanted to be taken to a spot where a 1954 Ford was parked and took $200 which Davidson said he man drew a gun and told him to drive to Lexington.

The man then signed him at a spot where a 1954 Ford was parked and took $200 which Davidson said he man drew a gun and told him to drive to Lexington.

Albert Danton of Richmond, Va. told the sheriff's department he picked up a hitchhiker outside Greensboro about 2 a.m. Danton said the man drew a gun and told him to drive to Lexington.

Hostages Awaiting Freedom

GUANTANAMO, Cuba (AP)—Cuban rebels were expected to begin releasing their 29 captive American servicemen this afternoon after holding them more than two weeks.

"We are hopeful all will be released," William messenger Rear Adm. Robert B. Ellis, commander of the big American naval base on Guantanamo Bay, where the prisoners are stationed.

The evacuation from the rebels isolated mountain camps may take four days or more.

Word of the anticipated release came from U.S. Consul Park W. Lom, who has been dickering with Fidel Castro and his lieutenants in the mountains of Oriente province for the captives' return.

"We are hopeful all will be released," William messenger Rear Adm. Robert B. Ellis, commander of the big American naval base on Guantanamo Bay, where the prisoners are stationed.

The captives have been the only foreign aircraft allowed to fly over rebellious Oriente province by President Fulgencio Batista's government. Yesterday a U.S. Marine flying B-26 bomber apparently strayed off its prescribed course on a flight from Guantanamo to Opa-Locka, Fla., and was forced down by Cuban army fighter planes.

The lumbering transport landed at Santiago, the capital of Oriente, a U.S. consul there quickly intervened and the plane was on its way again a few hours later.

The U.S. Embassy at Havana minimized the incident as "unimportant." The official Cuban explanation was that a misuderstanding had arisen because the navy fighter pilots had been "unable to determine the aircraft's intentions."

Later the Navy ordered all flights using the Guantanamo airstrip to fly 10 miles off the Oriente coastline.

The rebels' decision to stop as genuine belligerents appeared to indicate they have given up hope the kidnappings would help them wheedle concessions from the United States.

They had been seeking recognition as genuine belligerents instead of unorganized revolutionaries—and hoped this might lead to a promise of U.S. aid to President Fulgencio Batista's government would be shut off.

One benefit the rebels have gained was a letup in air attacks by government forces to keep them from the captives. The rebels have gained valuable time to regroup their forces.

At the same time American opinion toward Castro appears to have grown less friendly. Officials here have been indignant and resentful over the prolonged captivity of their men.

Ed Thurgood, 74, said he had named the victims not to overload their 14-foot wooden boat as they prepared yesterday to end a six-weekend of fishing in Benson Lake, 12 miles west of the city.

Sheriff Harold Woodson said the craft, heavily laden with seven people and camping and fishing equipment, struck a cypress stump in the lake, hurling the occupants into seven feet of water. Only a woman and a

No Inquiry Planned

Tax Prober Cool On Goldfine Case

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Wilbur Mills (D-Ark.) said today he has no present plan to start a tax inquiry involving Bernard Goldfine, gift-giving friend of presidential aide Sherman Adams.

Mills heads the Ways and Means Committee, which handles tax questions.

Rep. Owen Harris (D-Ark.), chairman of the Commerce subcommittee now checking Goldfine's tangled financial affairs, disclosed yesterday he had talked to Mills "with reference to any possible income tax evasion."

Harris said his inquiry is limited to how regulatory agencies carry out the law. His subcommittee has brought out that Goldfine charged firms like hotel bills for Adams as business expenses.

Both Goldfine and Adams have pictured Goldfine's favors for Eisenhower's top aide as acts of friendship. But Harris' estimators say if that's true, then Goldfine's favors could not properly have been deducted as business costs. Goldfine said his accountants had handled the deductions as a matter of routine.

Mills did not rule out the possibility that his group might go into the tax angle at some future time. However, he said in an interview that "I have no plan to do anything at the moment."

Mills said Harris "hasn't talked to me in an official way" on the question, but had just raised the question briefly without supplying details.

Just before the real estate and textile millionaire flew home to Boston over the weekend, he blasted his congressional interrogators for what he called their "unsubstantiated" and "unsubstantiated" attacks on his affairs.

The subcommittee has threatened to cite him for contempt for not answering, so far, 22 financial questions which Goldfine says he has nothing to do with the subcommittee inquiry.

Woodson identified the dead as Mrs. Henry's husband, 60, his 35-year-old son, Wayne, David Linder, 44, also of Pine Bluff; his wife, about 40, and their two daughters, Dottie Lou, 3, and Sandra, 5.

Mrs. Henry was under sedation at a hospital here but her condition was not believed serious. Thurgood said the two families arrived at his landing Saturday afternoon by boat, after leaving their car at the home of his son, Willie Thurgood, a mile up the lake. They spent Saturday night in a cabin at the landing and had fished early yesterday morning.

The aged man said that as the Henrys and the Linders prepared to leave the landing and return to their car yesterday, he warned them not to overboard their boat and close himself to walk the distance on shore.

Mob Kills Former Regent

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
A military coup ousted the pro-western regime today in Iraq, keystone of the Baghdad Pact, and proclaimed a pro-Nasser government.

Baghdad radio said King Faisal had been overthrown and a republic established. An Army brigadier was named as leader of the coup.

The broadcast said Crown Prince Abdul Ilah, Faisal's uncle and former regent, was beaten to death by a mob and his body dismembered and burned in the streets.

Reports from Cairo, capital of Egypt and Syria, said Premier Nuri Said, the pro-Western strong man of Iraq, also had been killed by a mob.

There was no direct word of 23-year-old Faisal, who also is chief of state of the new Iraq-Jordan federation formed Feb. 14, 1958, to counter Nasser's UAR, organized two weeks before. The Communist radio in Budapest said he had been arrested by the army.

The Jordan Embassy in London announced, however, that 23-year-old King Hussein of Jordan, Faisal's Hashemite cousin, was undertaking to re-establish "public security and order on both sides of the Jordan."

The Baghdad broadcasts were greeted with jubilation in Cairo, Damascus, Moscow and east European satellite capitals.

Here in Beirut, rent for more than two months by a revolt against pro-Western President Camille Chamoun, rebels in the Mezzanin quarter celebrated with a wild firing of guns.

Communist broadcasts said the coup was carried out because Iraq had planned to give military aid to the Lebanese capital.

Baghdad radio named Brig. Gen. Abdel Karim Kassem leader of the coup. He was said to have named a 15-man cabinet and a three-man sovereignty council headed by Lt. Gen. Naguib el-Bakri. The council, it was announced, would exercise sovereignty until a plebiscite for President could be held.

Broadcasts monitored in Cairo said the new revolutionary command announced a purge of army officers and abolition of the monarchy, and declared an official holiday.

"FULL ARAB UNITY"
"We have decided to form an Arab republic which adheres to full Arab unity, cooperates with other Arab and Moslem countries, observes the principles of the United Nations, and honors its obligations according to the country's interests and according to the 1955 Asian-African Bandung conference."

—'I KNEW SOMETHING WAS WRONG'— Fishing Trip Ends In Death For Six

STUTTGART, Ark. (AP)—"I heard the motor kick off and I knew something was wrong," a stunned boat landing operator said today as he told of the impact three men "all in the water."

Ed Thurgood, 74, said he had named the victims not to overload their 14-foot wooden boat as they prepared yesterday to end a six-weekend of fishing in Benson Lake, 12 miles west of the city.

Sheriff Harold Woodson said the craft, heavily laden with seven people and camping and fishing equipment, struck a cypress stump in the lake, hurling the occupants into seven feet of water. Only a woman and a small dog survived.

Woodson identified the dead as Mrs. Henry's husband, 60, his 35-year-old son, Wayne, David Linder, 44, also of Pine Bluff; his wife, about 40, and their two daughters, Dottie Lou, 3, and Sandra, 5.

Mrs. Henry was under sedation at a hospital here but her condition was not believed serious. Thurgood said the two families arrived at his landing Saturday afternoon by boat, after leaving their car at the home of his son, Willie Thurgood, a mile up the lake. They spent Saturday night in a cabin at the landing and had fished early yesterday morning.

The aged man said that as the Henrys and the Linders prepared to leave the landing and return to their car yesterday, he warned them not to overboard their boat and close himself to walk the distance on shore.

They found the death craft abandoned except for a little debris floating about the bodies of the three children.

The two recovered the bodies of the little girls. Others at the Willie Thurgood home brought in the body of the boy and Mrs. Henry, who was found barely conscious among the branches of the cypress tree-studded shore line.

VAIN ATTEMPT
Volunteers applied artificial respiration for an hour and a half in vain attempt to revive the children.

Woodson said attempts to recover the bodies of the adult victims would continue today.
