It's Done With A Twist Of The Wrist

THERE is more than one way to skin a fiscal cat in North Carolina.

When more state revenue is needed, Tar Hill legislators can either raise existing taxes or find something new to tax.

The cat is skinned all right, but so is the average taxpayer.

A simpler, definitely less painful technique is available this year. It is a pay-as-you-go collection plan for state income taxes.

That's good enough for us and it's apparently good enough for State Sen. Claude Currie of Durham if the Hodges administration fails to recommend a withholding tax plan to the 1959 General Assembly.

There are two good reasons why the withholding system should be installed:

Even Gratitude Has Respectable Limits

At least, credit the governor and his Council of State with good intentions.

They sincerely wanted to do something for the Fourth Estate. So they approved a plan to add a press box to the east portico of the Capitol in Raleigh.

Perhaps we ought to be appreciative. But we keep thinking of Ogden Nash's grateful optimism.

So the tired of her husband's cheery note And she stuffed a tea tray down his throat.

The point is that even gratitude has respectable limits—and we can summon up no appreciation whatsoever for what Raleigh's officialdom would stuff down our throats.

Words Tackle Big Problems In France

THE lingo of Gallic politics often seems so much more flamboyant than our own. In Washington we may have "liberals" or "reactionaries," but in France political vocabularies glow with words like "caesars," "princes," "bukes," "dynasties," all harking to the royal past.

New Premier Michel Debre, who is to be President de Gaulle's handyman in the quest for French fortune, is the type of man who at once popularizes this colorful lingo and makes it necessary.

VIVA LA MUERTE!

It has been estimated though we can't say how accurately that in the highest and handsomest city of Dodge City, Kan., the annual toll of deaths from gunshot and knife wounds came to an average of slightly more than seven, or somewhat better than one every two months.

The historic Wild West seems more staid and well-behaved when compared to the reconstructed Wild West that is presented nightly for our edification on the television screen.

President Nails National Defense To A Cross Of Gold

By JOSEPH ALSOP

WASHINGTON (AP)—The President's "Can government based upon liberty permanently endure, when ceaselessly challenged by a dictatorship (controlling great and growing) economic and military power?"

The President opened his State of the Union message with this gloom inquiry. It was the most important thing in the whole message. Here, in this question of the President's was the essential clue to the central mystery of Eisenhower.

The mystery itself can be simply stated. From the outset, the Eisenhower administration has persistently starved the national defense of the United States.

As the President is neither a criminal nor a lunatic, there must be some rational explanation of this seemingly irrational course of action.

real context, you have the explanation.

The context of the President's question was best summed up by the former secretary of the Treasury, George M. Humphrey, who still has more influence at the White House than any other single individual.

Without these trimmings, however, the Humphrey idea is simplicity itself. It is the idea that adequate investments in national defense are dangerous to the free enterprise system, and are therefore more dangerous to the United States than the Soviet Union's whole vast panoply of military might.

'Needy' Cities Are Caught Between Ike And Congress

By CONGRESSIONAL QUARTERLY

WASHINGTON (AP)—How much help America's cities will get this year from the federal government depends upon whether Congress or President Eisenhower wins the "battle of the budget."

As far as Congress goes, the outlook is bright for cities. Sen. Joseph P. Kamp (D-Ill.) says that the House will pass a bill to help cities.

As for the Eisenhower administration, the President's message is abundantly clear. He thinks it high time the Federal Government's money was put to work on the cities.

He also recommended a cut back in the money the federal government gives communities for sewerage plants.

The argument for the legislation will be that cities cannot raise enough money to do those jobs by themselves.

The cities' major legislative goals appear to have the support of the majority of the House and the Senate.

Career Reservists Are Little Better Than Sharecroppers

By ROBERT C. RUARK

SOME TIME this year, if not sooner, the military forces can find time out of interservice competition for self-purraise.

These sort of parish warrors do every thing for the same pay that the regulars do, and sometimes they have been known to do it a little better.

The other way out No one at all seems to have thought of the other way out—stopping the lying about our national situation; telling the country the plain truth about our danger; and asking the country to pay the taxes, including if that be a federal sales tax.

Dark Picture? Patrick Healy Jr., executive director of the American Municipal Assn., which represents about 13,000 cities and towns, contends the cities are going to have a hard time getting legislation enacted.

Big Question So the big question in the minds of city leaders is whether liberal Democrats and Republicans will join forces to override the expected presidential vetoes.
