LYNCH LOOKED LIKE GIARDELLO

(From AP Reports)

ANY RESEMBLANCE in welterweight Eddie (Pigeon) Lynch to middleweight Joey Giardello is purely intentional. And it's the work of Giardello's trainer, Johnny Sutla, who's been helping Lynch in his training. Last night it paid off as Lynch won a 10-round upset in a TV match over Jimmy Archer. Both judges and the referee had Lynch far ahead of the favored Archer.

IT'S UP TO Los Angeles voters today to call the Dodgers safe or out at Chavez Ravine. The people were to decide today whether Dodger President Walter O'Malley goes ahead with his dream of building a stadium in the weed-grown site only a mile from the civic center.

GEORGE ARAUJO, a former top contender for the world's lightweight title, is mapping a comeback after 30 months in the Army. Araujo, who knocked out current champ Joe Brown in 1952, plans to return to ring warfare in the fall. He registered 33 kayos in compiling a 55-7-1 record. Only 27, Araujo has beaten the likes of Del Flanagan, Sandy Saddler, Orlando Zulueta and Paddy DeMarco.

THE DETROIT Tiger incentive pay squabble moved quickly into the hush-hush stage today after Al Kaline and Charlie Maxwell said they had agreements for more top pay for top performances. Incentive pay deals whether written or verbal are in violation of baseball rules. General Manager John McHale emphatically denied any side deals with players.

ONE OF THE Los Angeles Rams' great quarterbacks, Bob Waterfield, returns as their No. 2 coach for the 1958 National Football League season. Waterfield was yesterday named assistant to Head Coach Sid Gillman. He'll work with quarterbacks and kickers as his main duty. He retired after the 1952 season and has been associated with his wife, Jane Russell, in motion picture production since.

Oriale Manager Paul Richards fined Loes $100 yesterday and suspended him three days. American League President Will Harridge duplicated Richards' suspension. Loes shoved Umpire Larry Nap Sunday and threw away his cap and glove.

'MY FOOT IN YOUR MOUTH' . . . says Argentina Rocca as he deftly swats Hans Schnabel

Schnabel Goes 'Boom'

Rocca Screaming For Bolo

Argentina Rocca handled bearish Hans Schnabel like a kitten last night at Park Center and now is screaming for bigger game.

"Give me The Great Bolo," snorted the South American barefoot boy, "and I'll make him eat his mask."

He might do just that.

Only once did Schnabel, a 260 pounder and rough as they come, really get to the visitor from the Argentine. He won the second fall with his famed Milwaukee blockbuster.

* * *

ROCCA TOOK the first fall with his artful roll, which came after a series of dropkicks.

He made Schnabel submit to a tortuous backbreaker, in whic hthe big German was elevated over Rocca's head, for the grand finale.

Rocca used his varied assortment of tricks —and his barefoot art completely befuddled Hans.

In the opener, Gory Guererro continued to be a crowd pleaser by putting Harry Lewis, a New Yorker, out of action.

The team of Chick and Leo Garibaldi was too clever for Jim Austeri and Jack O'Rielly and won that engagement.

Then there was the Great Bolo, winning as usual. He smacked Nick Roberts with his expected butting tactics preserving his streak at Park Center. The big question: will Bolo meet Rocca if the match can be arranged? Keep tuned!

A Not-So-Lucky Man

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ By Max Muhleman

THERE should be genuine pity for Ed Elisian, the blackest Black Sheep in racing.

It was tragic that Pat O'Connor should have been so horribly killed at Indianapolis Friday. He was the shining knight of motor sport. Neither profanity nor intoxication nor debauchery have ever been associated with his name. His passing wrought unparalleled grief in a calloused world of speeding cars and hard living.

But perhaps the cross of Ed Elisian — the Hell on earth with which he must now contend — is greater to bear than death itself was for Pat O'Connor, who must surely have been as well prepared as any driver who ever lived.

Elisian is the big, swarthy Californian whose eagerness to take the 500 lead on a dangerous turn created the havoc of careening race cars which cost O'Connor his life.

He is stocky almost to the point of being fat. He takes little pride in his dress, seems always to be sweating and is boisterously cocky in conversation. It is not hard to dislike Ed Elisian at first sight.

* * *

SATURDAY NIGHT, however, husky Ed plodded unexpectedly into the banquet hall where some 1,200 guests of the United States Auto Club were enjoying the annual Indianapolis Awards Dinner.

He took the microphone at the head table and softly said, "Perhaps I did haul Dick Rathmann down into the corner too hard. But I am a race driver and going hard is my way of life. I've had guys spin in front of me and wreck me before—it's all unintentional. I liked Pat O'Connor as well as anyone here. Now I must live with this thing and whatever you say about it. . . There is a reason I've been driving hard — I hate it that it led to this."

Then he walked away, his speech delivered with incredible nerve.

It brought to light several things about Ed Elisian that perhaps should not be hastily forgotten.

* * *

FIRST, NO one has yet made the observation of what might have been.

Had the incident occurred on the turn at the end of the main stretch, where all grandstand patrons focus their attention, and had no one been hurt and the only misfortune had been Elisian's skid to the wall and wreckage of his car, wouldn't Ed Elisian have been the toast of the hour?

It is not hard to hear the applause that might have gone up for this man of daring and nerve, who darted into the lead for a precious second before skidding into concrete. Viva la Bravery! Back to the race! Let us see more!

* * *

IT IS THE same Elisian who was branded an ignominous murderer by his colleagu. and barred from his profession who locked up his Westwood special and parked it in the infield in 1955 to race to the flaming car of Bill Vukovich and attempt to save the life of the popular chauffeur who was gunning for his third straight 500 triumph when he flipped to his death.

Elisian was in good running position for the first time in any of his Indy campaigns. A sizeable chunk of money and fame was forfeited to go to Vuky's aid. Others saw the flarring Vukovich car and reared on with a shake of their head. Once you leave your car at Indy you're through racing for the day. But that didn't matter to Elisian the fcteful Memorial Day of 1955. He settled for 30th place and the knowledge that he did his all to save a great man.

* * *

WHEN ELISIAN said there was a reason he had been driving hard, he most likely referred to a bad check-passing spree which had him in the hole to authorities to the tune of some $30,000.

He promised to pay back the money through his race winnings.

But perhaps he had in mind the great amount of needling he had received from Dick Rathmann and a few others—"You set the one-lap record, Elisian, (148 MPH) but you won't know which way we went in the race."

How sweet it would have been to come roaring down pit row ahead of Mr. Rathmann on that first trip around.

And in considering Rathmann's statement, "I'll never forgive Elisian," remember that Rathmann and O'Connor were best friends. If the spin were not Elisian's fault, it had to be Rathmann's.

* * *

ED ELISIAN is not a noble man by most standards. He is an earthy, hard-living man who perhaps has encountered more than his share of jams and perhaps lusted a little harder than most for the money of a race victory because of the salvation it provided to his many problems.

But do not turn your back on Ed Elisian as a human being, as too many of his own already have.

Pat O'Connor is dead — but who can say by whose hand?

The late Grand Prix driver Portago once said, "I would rather die on the track than any other way because automatically you are a martyr."

Portago did.

O'Connor did.

Elisian was not so lucky.

Legion Opener Set On Thursday

A change in schedule will see the local Legion Junior baseball team make its home debut on Thursday night at Griffith Park against Gastonia, instead of tonight at Richard Field as has been announced.

"This change was made sometime ago," said Coach Fred Sevens, "but some of the schedules circulating apparently haven't been changed."

The Juniors will tune up for their first home appearance by meeting Bessemer City on the latter's field tomorrow night.

The Thursday night game will open a three-game home stand for Sever's club. Belmont comes here for a Richard Field game Friday night and Shelby moves in to do battle at Griffith Park on Saturday night.

Mount Holly swings back into action tonight after splitting two weekend games. Coach Ken Wood's Club meets Bessemer City at Mount Holly at 8 p.m.
