WEEKLY EPITAPH.

TOMBSTONE, ARIZONA, JUNE 3, 1882.

[illegible]TION.

In nomina[illegible]andidates for the legislature the Democratic party should be careful to select men of ability, and those pledged to equal taxation. At the last session, in repealing the bullion-tax act, the legislative assembly enacted no law as a substitute, and, in consequence, mining property is taxable far beyond any other class of property. Upon what basis mines should, in equity, be assessed is a difficult problem to grasp and, for that reason, good judgment should be exercised in choosing legislators. A non-productive mine should not be taxed at all, and the rate of taxation placed against a productive mine should be so guaged as to be equal to that demanded from any other property. The mineral resources of Arizona constitute its main dependence, and should therefore be carefully fostered. Mining enterprises, unlike mercantile and other ventures, cannot fasten any portion of their taxes upon the consumer. The problem is only one of simple substraction. It must not be considered, however, that we claim that mining property should be exempt from taxation. We only assert that it should be so rated that the tax will be levied justly and equitably, so that the investor in mines will be equally protected with the owner of other classes of property. As the law now stands the miner is taxed unjustly and exhorbitantly.

The action of J. H. Jackson, deputy United States Marshal and ex-chief of the Rangers, in refusing the use of the horses still in his charge, in behalf of humanity and for the protection of endangered women and children, cannot be too strongly condemned. Having the only available horses in the city, with helpless families in immediate danger of being masacred by savages, he found no other instinct within his heart but that of malice. With the situation fully explained to him, with his past services wholly paid for, and owing his position as deputy marshal to the people of Tombstone, he could [illegible] state that he had not been treat[illegible]d well by the citizens, and, therefore, he would not stir a step nor allow anyone else to go to save the possible slaughter of innocent human beings. Truly, the citizens of Cochise county owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Jackson, a debt that will [illegible]e liquidated. It is stated that he aspires to be a candidate for a high coun[illegible]y office, but we say to him, as will brave men, everywhere, that no man who allows vindictiveness to blot out humanity, can be permitted to hold any office, the requirements of which demand a measure of justice. We have never abused Mr. Jackson, for the simple reason that we have known nothing of him, but henceforth, the EPITAPH can only maintain that he is unfit to hold any office within the [illegible]t of the people. Holding the only [illegible]ance of succor for isolated families [illegible]rounded by hostile Indians, he [illegible]held it; having the means to pre[illegible]nt a possible massacre, he de[illegible]ied them; and for what reason? Only because he had not received for [illegible]acts, the praise he thinks he de[illegible]rved. What makes the action of [illegible]r. Jackson still more questionable, is the fact that the horses he refused are not his, but the people's.

The killing of two men, not more than twenty miles from Tombstone, by renegades, from the Reservation, is another chapter in the history of our Indian troubles, not pleasant to dwell upon. The Territory is full of soldiers, and why these devilish wretches are allowed to move back and forth from their asylum on the San Carlos, is beyond comprehension. That distinguished warrior, the commander of the Department, who takes his ease in the cooling shade of Whipple Barracks, announced with a flourish of trumpets a short time since, that a cordon of troops should be placed along the border, and that Tiffany's pets should be closely watched. And yet, in the face of such promises, here are two of our citizens murdered by these fiends, who, unmolested, are leisurely pursuing their way over the border.

It is a disgrace to American soldiery that they are subject to the imbecility which has all along marked the course of the department commander. Instead of keeping troops in the southern portion of the Territory, where the real danger exists, he has ordered several companies to the north, where there is no more fear from Indians than there is in New York. In the name of our murdered citizens, whose blood has moist[illegible] many a valley and moun[illegible] [illegible] county, we de[illegible] [illegible]ent afford our [illegible] and send a [illegible]perations, [illegible]se and INDIAN DEVILTRY.

Two Men Killed at the South Pass of the Dragoons.

The Remains Brought Here Yesterday.

About noon time yesterday the city was thrown into a fever of excitement and indignation, in consequence of the arrival of the dead and mutilated bodies of Seymour Dye and Harry Curry, who were killed by the savage redskins near the South Pass of the Dragoon Mountains on Tuesday. The remains were brought here from Dial's ranch, under an escort of six men. Two of the party escorting the bodies were eye-witnesses of the slaughter. No description that we could give of the scene would be as vivid as the following statement made to an EPITAPH reporter yesterday by Wm. H. Gill, who saw the murders committed, about half a mile distant from his place of observation:

"Tuesday noon, I was about six miles beyond Dial's ranch, in the South Pass; met three Indians driving about fifteen head of stock. About a mile nearer Dial's, saw two men ahead of me on a load of hay with three Indians on horseback following them. Saw the Indians rise from an arroyo a short distance behind, as they left the stack. They overtook them as they got to the road about one-quarter of a mile south of the stacks. They run in ahead of them on the road just as they reached that point, and fired one shot just as they were passing. The horses on the hay wagon, getting frightened, wheeled around in the direction of the hay stacks. The Indians again headed them off and fired one more shot. The two wagon horses stopped, and the Indians dismounted and commenced to unhitch them. Was about half or three-quarters of a mile in the rear during this time. Saw a man fall off the load as the last shot was fired. Supposed the two men were killed, and then turned back. Went back in the direction of the Chiricahuas, and had not proceeded more than a mile when we saw two Indians coming down off a hill about a mile ahead of us to the south of the road. We were on foot and driving a pack horse. Had one gun and a revolver. The Indians followed us for about half a mile. We climbed on top of a hill, lost sight of the Indians, and stopped there until evening, and then went to Dial's. Did not go by the road, consequently did not see the dead men until yesterday morning, when Dial sent out some men with a team to fetch them in. Dial had no knowledge of the occurrence until informed by us. He had seen no Indians, nor sign of any, except a loud barking of dogs on the evening of the occurrence. The murdered men had been dragged about 150 yards after death. Both were scratched to a certain extent but not mutilated."

The unfortunate victims of barbarism and hate were employed as woodchoppers in the Dragoons, and had gone to the place mentioned by Mr. Gill for a load o hay. S. Neathery and the two murdered men were partners. From him we learn that Dye has a family residing at Alagan, Michigan, and Curry had no family so far as is known. Dye was thirty-five years old and Curry thirty-one. They had no property. The hostiles departed from the scene of the murder in a southeasterly direction, making for Sonora. They had a band of about 40 horses, and the presumption is gaining ground that they are driving the stock to Sonora to reinforce Juh's band that had been so thoroughly demoralized by the Mexican troops recently. While the sight of the ghastly remains naturally excited the people, still a general revolt of the savages is not expected, or danger anticipated except from a few straggling bands wandering through exposed settlements on their way back and forth between Sonora and the reservation. An inquest was held by coroner Matthews on the bodies yesterday, and a verdict returned according to the above facts.

MINES AND MINING.

Our Weekly Review.

The mining outlook in Tombstone, never appeared brighter or gave promise of more brilliant results, than at the present moment. The leading claims are yielding more than the average quantities of ore, and the mill results are fully up to the usual standard. The litigation which has impeded the prosecution of work on some of our most valuable mines, has been brought to a close, and operations will be resumed on a larger scale than ever before. With the starting of the Tranquility and the Intervener, several hundred men will be set at work.

Thus far the work of development in the district, has demonstrated the fact, that as depth is reached, the ore bodies improve in size and richness. As near as we have been able to ascertain, the bullion yield for May is fully up to the preceding month, and with the starting up of the Boston Company's mill near Charleston, we look to see it largely increased for June. Now that the Huachuca Water company have their works nearly completed, it is almost certain that one, or perhaps two new mills, will be erected near town. The saving in the cost of transportation will enable the owners to work the immense dumps of low grade ores which have accumulated in this camp during the past three years.

Looking the mining field carefully over, it is a pleasure to note the evidences of success and prosperity on every side; and at this time when our people have received such a severe blow from the fiery element, it is still more gratifying to record them.

Below we give the latest developments all along the line;

EMPIRE.

The drifts on the 400 and 450 foot levels are still being pushed ahead, 38 feet being gained in the former during the past week. A cross cut to the east has been on this level and is now in 26 feet, all the way in fine ore. Rich stringers of ore have also been encountered in the face of the drift, and everything indicates the presence of an ore body. The large ore body on the 450 foot level is steadily enlarging, showing a pronounced dip to the east. No stoping is at present being done, all the work being in the way of development. As far as explored the ore body on the 450 foot level is from 25 to 30 feet in width. About 7 tons of ore is being hoisted daily. Under the judicious management of Supt. Abbott, the mine is being thoroughly prospected, and promises to become one of our steady bullion producers.

GRAND CENTRAL.

Nothing of unusual importance has transpired in the Grand Central during the past week. The drifts heretofore reported are being driven in the 4, 5 and 600 foot levels. All are looking well, and the mine is in excellent condition. The main cross cut in the 600 foot level (new works) is in 130 feet, in very promising ground. The stopes and all upper works are in excellent condition. Ninety tons of ore are shipped daily, and the mill is being gained on at the rate of ten tons a day. This will enable the mine to have a big start on the mill when the rainy season begins. It is expected that the bullion shipment this month will exceed that of last.

BOB INGERSOLL.

The foreman of this mine was in high glee, when our reporter visited the mine yesterday. Cause: a big strike. Some of the richest ore extracted from a Tombstone mine, has been taken from the Ingersoll, within a few days past. The ore body referred to, was discovered on the 80 foot level, by the side of an old stope. It was struck accidentally. A set of timbers were being put in and to make room for the sill it was necessary to blast out some rock. The blast discovered the bonanza, at first looking feeble, but further developments discovered a large body of extremely rich ore, that there is no mistake in saying will assay away up in the thousands. The works heretofore mentioned are continued. A new drift has been started west from the shaft on the 100 foot level. The ground is easily worked, and the drift is in 50 feet already, and shows fine indications of ore. The upraise on the incline shaft is being prosecuted vigorously, and will soon be ready for the steam hoisting engine. The north drift in the 150 foot level is in about 60 feet. The southwest drift in the 80 foot level is in 110 feet. About 10 tons of ore hoisted daily.

THE TRANQUILITY.

Superintendent Farrel was absent from the city yesterday, and we are indebted to Foreman Lowry for the following: Active preparations are being made for extensive work on the Tranquility. The shaft is down 450 feet, and a new cage is being placed in position, and will be ready in a few days. There are four levels opened in the mine, at one, two, three and four hundred feet. A large body of ore is in sight, which will be stoped out vigorously. Will make connection with the Head Centre in a few weeks. The shaft near line of Head Centre is down 100 feet. Will start drifts from all the levels, and open up the mine.

Two steam engines are pumping from the Sulphuret mill and Contention mine and yielding a never failing supply of water.

Work has been suspended on the Girard for the present, and the entire force of miners will be transferred to the Tranquility in a few days.

GOOD SAMARITAN (BUNKER HILL GOLD & SILVER M. CO.)

The main shaft of this promising mine is down 270 feet, and the work of sinking continues. Drifting both ways from the 240 foot level, and making an upraise from the same place. Seven feet of ore exposed in north drift, and the wall not yet discovered. The upraise from the north drift has been carried 50 feet in ore. The south drift in a 2½ foot vein of ore. The shaft has been sunk through an ore body all the way. The 1st level is 85 feet deep, the second, 185 feet, and the third, 240 feet. Drifts have been run from each level, 1st: south drift in 81 feet, north, 25 feet. 2nd: south drift, 25 feet; north, 60 feet. 3rd: south, 30 feet; north, 50 feet. The main ledge 12 feet wide, wherever cut. Hoisting 15 tons of ore daily, that will run from $40 to $80.

STONEWALL.

The main shaft of the Stonewall, is now down 290 feet, with levels at 100 and 160 feet. They are still sinking in ore and the the mine is looking well. The tunnel west of shaft is in 170 feet, mostly in ore, and the drift east of shaft is in 100 feet, cutting through frequent bodies of high grade ore. In the 160 foot level, drifts are being driven both ways. Twenty-five tons of ore extracted daily, and 300 tons have been shipped during the past eight days.

THE OLD GUARD.

On the 230 foot level the north drift has reached a point below the winze from the 150, and they are now upraising to connect; working in ore. On the 90 foot level the north drift has crossed a streak of ore, and very rich. Have started a winze on the vein. Will commence sinking shaft No. 2 to-day to connect with the north drift on the 80 foot level, in the ore body.

In consequence of the change in day of publication of our weekly mining review, we are unable to present the reports of several superintendents, this week.

The rumor published in the EPITAPH that a mill is to be erected on the Randolph mine, is authoritively denied.

No camp ever discovered on this coast has declared fewer "Irish dividends," than Tombstone.

Superintendent Church is expected from Tucson to-day.

Tombstone stocks are still favorites in the Eastern markets.

CAPTAIN JACKSON.

Strange Conduct of the ex-Chief of the Rangers.

When the news of the Indian massacre reached town yesterday accompanied by the gory spectacle of the deviltry, the first thought that sprung to every generous breast was for the safety of the families, women and children that were known to reside in that vicinity. There was no lack of volunteers to risk their lives in the attempt to shield the exposed families from the vengeance of the savages, but the difficulty lay in getting horses to mount the men. The hores of the late rangers were thought of and it was resolved to make an effort to secure them for the generous purpose in view. The horses were known to be in the possession of the ex-chief of rangers, Jackson, and Briggs Goodrich, of the firm of Goodrich & Goodrich, lawers, in company with [illegible] editor of the EPITAPH, sought an interview with Jackson in the Messrs. Goodrich's office in Fourth street. The matter was briefly explained to the ex-captain, and the danger the women and children underwent in their isolated situation fully adverted to, and finally an appeal made to him to loan some of the horses, and accompany a party for the purpose of rendering assistance to the exposed settlers. This Jackson flatly refused to do, saying that while in command of the rangers, a number of the citizens had not sustained him, and that the city press had written slightingly of him. He was asked if he would not loan the horses, if he did not feel disposed to go himself, and this request was also firmly denied. He was remonstrated with by Mr. Goodrich, and reminded that when the lives of women and children were at stake, personal motives should not interfere with the natural promptings of humanity, and that it was impossible to find horses elsewhere. Still he was obdurate, and it was mildly hinted to him that the citizens paid for the horses and he had at most but a limited interest. He said he did not care; that the horses were in his possession, and he intended to control them. This interview transpized in the presence of a number of getlemen. Mr. Goodrich and the editor of this journal then sought a number of gentlemen who were known to have contributed money for raising and equipping the rangers. Among those visited were Ben Goodrich, A. T. Jones, Wm. Hutchison, Summerfield Bros., Col. Hafford, Hawkins & Boardman, M. E. Joyce, H. Solomon, John O. Dunbar and others. All these gentlemen advised taking the horses. Mr. Herring was visited, it being understood that he was one of the committee charged with the managementof the rangers and their equipment. He expressed himself as surprised and indignant at Jackson's conduct, but denied being a member of the committee, and said Judge Dibble was the only member of the committee in town. Judge Dibble, upon hearing of Jackson's conduct, accompanied Mr. Hawkins and had an interview with him, which resulted in Jackson coming to his senses and recognizing the fact that his conduct was reprehensible in the extreme. He then attempted to raise a body of men himself, but failed, and finally accompanied Deputy Sheriff Hereford and Coleman to Dials. If Jackson had not allowed his mulish attributes to interfere with the intentions of the citizens, a strong party would have started six hours before the few who departed about dusk. It is to be hoped that nothing serious occurred, but in any event, Mr. Jackson was the reverse of earning the gratitude of his fellow citizens.

Throw Up Your Hands!

About eleven o'clock last night, a man whose name we were unable to learn, was "held up" and robbed of twenty-nine dollars, near the slaughter house, on the Charleston road. It seems he purchased a pair of mules, yesterday, for the purpose of hauling adobes from the yards to town, and it being generally understood that he was flush, in a financial sense, the thieves calculated on a raid. He was accompanied out as far as the slaughter house by a strange man who ingratiated himself into his friendship, and induced him to walk out that way with him. At that point they were met by two men who ordered him to throw up his hands, which he promptly did, being unarmed. He had twenty-nine dollars on his person of which he was relieved. The robbers were masqued, and escaped. The man came to town and got a few friends to go and search for the thieves, but at the hour of going to press they had not yet returned.
