Santiago Reds' March On Embassy Broken Up

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — One of the heaviest concentrations of police ever seen in Santiago broke up a Communist - led "march on the U.S. embassy" here Tuesday night.

A crowd of about 2,500 persons, who had been attending a Red-organized meeting on the eve of the opening of the Western Hemisphere foreign ministers' conference here, started down Merced Street toward the embassy when the meeting broke up.

Scores of police, on the alert for trouble, quickly headed off the crowd and turned in onto the nearby Mapocho River bridge. There was no major outbreak of violence, and no casualties were reported.

Police on foot and on horseback had been posted to guard the embassy, where U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter will live for the five-day duration of the conference. Motorized troops were held in reserve nearby to deal with serious disorders.

The Red-organized meeting, called in competition with the conference to demonstrate leftist support for the governments of Cuba and Venezuela, was interrupted repeatedly by cheers for Cuban Premier Fidel Castro and jeers for the foreign ministers' meeting.

The United States is expected to warn Latin American leaders today that continued unrest in the Caribbean area plays into the hands of the Reds and weakens the Western Hemisphere politically and economically.

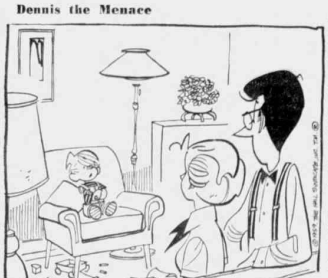

Herter will speak at least once and perhaps twice at the formal opening session of the conference in Santiago's Hotel Carrera.

At an organization meeting Tuesday night, the foreign ministers chose Germman Vergara of Chile to serve as president of the conference and set Aug. 17 as its tentative closing date.

Herter's first speech, in reply to an address of welcome by Chilean President Jorge Alessandri, will be a general statement on the aims of the conference, delivered as a spokesman for the 20 guest nations.

Herter will state the U.S. position on the Caribbean crisis in a later speech, either today or Thursday.

Fussing Can Increase Child's Nervousness

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M.D.
Written for NEA Service

I suspect that small children are more susceptible to developing nervous habits than human beings at any other age. When they do, the situation is often likely to be made worse by the fussing of the parents at the children.

Here are some examples: "My son is two years old and loves to be outside. When I put him there by himself, he cries and shouts, but stops the minute I go out. Will it hurt him to leave him in the big yard and let him cry it out?"

In another letter a mother writes that she has a little 3½-year-old girl who has had spells of holding her breath since she was a year old. It always happens when she falls or gets bumped. She has these spells on the average of once every two weeks.

A similar letter comes from the mother of a 5-year-old girl. Until the age of three, she writes, the girl was easy to deal with, but now she finds the child is terribly frustrated, sucks her thumb and has a problem with food. The girl is also aggressive and sassy, her mother says.

Usually Normal

Probably all mothers and fathers will recognize from these typical letters, experiences and worries they have had with their own children. With the possible exception of the little girl who holds her breath, and should be examined for some physical cause, the probabilities are that these are all cases of emotional strain in children of a perfectly normal type. The parents would be wise to think of possible causes, such as jealousy of another child, or lack of playmates as responsible for this kind of behavior.

They can also study their own attitude toward their children and make sure that the youngsters are confident of the parent's affection, consistency of discipline, love, and a general lack of quarreling around the home.

Handle Firmly, Kindly

If the parents can provide a happy, affectionate environment and not pay too much attention to these emotional qualities of their young children, and deal with them firmly but kindly, there is a good chance that they will be outgrown.

I also have a question about rupture in small babies and what causes them. These are inborn weaknesses of the muscles and other tissues which allow some of the contents of the abdomen to protrude through the weakened spot.

Whether surgical treatment of such a rupture should be undertaken, and the age at which it should be performed, depends on the location, size and some other factors which have to be evaluated by the surgeon.

3 Sentenced To Death For Assaults

LA GRANGE, Ga. (UPI)—Three Negroes were convicted Tuesday night of raping two young white women and were sentenced to die in the electric chair.

A jury of 11 white men and one Negro deliberated five hours before it returned a verdict of guilty without a recommendation of mercy against George Alford Jr., 18, of Dayton, Ohio, and Clifford Johnson, 22, and Brannon Epps, 25, both of La Grange.

The verdict carries an automatic death penalty, and presiding Judge Samuel Boykin immediately sentenced the three to be executed in the state penitentiary in Tatnall County on Oct. 2.

The defendants showed no signs of emotion when the judge pronounced sentence.

Tuesday's testimony in the swift, two-day trial came from the two victims, a thrice-married 20-year-old woman and her 18-year-old, unmarried cousin.

The Negroes were accused of abducting the women from their escorts as they were returning from a dance here, then taking them to a lonely road.

The Castro Revolution

Reds Have Subtle Strategy in Cuba

Associated Press Foreign News Analyst William L. Ryan, who was in Cuba when Fidel Castro's rebels punctured Fulgencio Batista's regime last New Year's Day, has just returned from a survey of how the Castro revolution is developing today. In this first of a series of three articles he reports on the status of the Communists in Cuba today.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

HAVANA (AP — Cuba's Communists have tried—and failed—to set up what they likely would consider an ideal situation for themselves in present circumstances. Banking on unwitting help from the United States, they now await a fresh opportunity.

To the Communists' delight, there has been a basic misconception of what they are up to in Cuba, and this tends to deflect U.S. attention from their immediate aims.

The Communists know—if many in the United States do not—that they are not strong enough to turn the island of Cuba into a Red satellite.

What they seek is a base for Red operations in the Caribbean and Latin America with complete freedom of action and communications. Cuba thus would be extremely valuable as a lever for creating turmoil all over the area.

The Communists tipped their hands July 17 when Fidel Castro resigned as premier in a maneuver to demonstrate his popularity with the masses.

Within two hours the Communists broadcast an appeal for a "government of national unity," meaning they wanted cabinet representation. They would have settled for one or two ministries and considered the situation ideal at this stage Castro held them off.

Participation in the government would nail down present Red advantages. The Communists have been highly successful, for example, in penetrating the army, and have the comfort of knowing its high command has many dedicated American - haters. Among the most dedicated these is Raul Castro, thin-lipped, fanatical 39 - year-old brother of the premier.

The Communists have penetrated the ranks of labor organizations. They are organized, disciplined and dangerous.

A "national unity" government would put the Communists in a good position to provoke angry and ill-considered responses from the United States. These provide Latin American Reds with what they need most: whipping boys as typical examples of "Yankee imperialism" trying to dictate to weaker countries.

There are few here who would accuse Castro himself of being Communist. What seems to be happening is that clashes involving North Americans tend to push the regime into the position of standing somewhere between being not antagonistic and being downright sympathetic to the Communist bloc.

The party plays expertly on inferiority complexes of weaker peoples to provoke the defiant attitude of the neglected child kicking its rich uncle in the shins. New revolutions need outside enemies, and "Yankee imperialism" fills the bill.

From the moment he took over, Castro found himself pushed more and more into a defensive posture by criticism from the United States. Only recently has he given any indication he realizes the dangerous position into which the Cuban revolution is being maneuvered.

The following story is vouched for by a reliable source. Castro had been debating with advisers about Cuba's sugar crop and how to move it in the world market in the face of slumped price and demand. Somebody informed him how the United States protects Cuba from price fluctuations by buying a sugar quota above the world market. The United States is buying about 3 million long tons of Cuba's current 5.8 million-top crop above the world price. Castro seemed stunned.

"Why," shouted Castro, "didn't somebody tell me about this before?"

Inexperience and amateurishness on the part of members of the regime help strengthen the Communists. Numerically they are not as strong today as they were in the early days of Fulgencio Batista's dictatorship, when they got their first real foothold.

At present the card - carrying Communists probably total about 12,000. Of these only a small number can be considered hard core, working for the interests of Moscow as transmitted by Juan Marinello, party president. Recently he was a glorified guest on a Communist bloc tour.

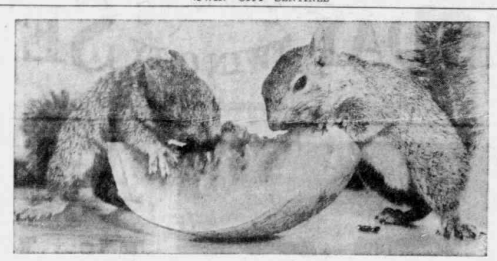

The Communists seek diligently to create and maintain in Cuba a climate basically hostile to the United States. They may succeed if uninformed and impatient elements in the United States goad Castro's followers into more violent anti-U.S. postures.

The best weapons the United States could use with regard to Cuba are tact, patience and intelligent appraisal of the situation to prevent what once was a hopeful-looking revolution from taking on an indelible Red color.

Agent Can Spot Still By Smell

Agents say that most moonshiners realize they're violating federal law.

But if they can operate a still for a short period of time without getting caught, they know it will be profitable enough to more than compensate for the cost of a smashed still and a fine in court.

With very few exceptions, bootleggers are friendly toward federal agents—know many of them by sight. "When we break up a still," an agent said, "the bootleggers often have a site picked out for the next one. They just expect to get by long enough to make it financially worthwhile to get caught."

Many people have the idea that moonshiners work harder in the summer and turn out more illegal liquor then because mash ferments faster in hot weather.

Yeast Is Key

Not so, say ATU agents. The amount of yeast used in the mixture determines how fast the liquor fermenis. Moonshiners are more active in summer months, they explained, because there are more leaves on the trees and foliage on the bushes. These furnish better cover for the operation. And this cover is more important now than it used to be because agents sometimes take to the air in light planes or helicopters to look for stills.

Summer poses another problem for federal agents.

When apples and peaches start falling off the trees this month and early in September bootleggers make brandy. This is a onetime operation. It is easier to conceal because brandy doesn't have to be checked as often and the operators don't leave as many tracks.

Attitude of Judge

One of the best weapons against bootlegging in North Carolina, officers say, is the attitude of the federal judge who hears the case against the bootlegger.

Stiffer fines and maximum sentences would make a man think twice before going into the business again. Records show that many of the men brought to trial are repeaters who have been tried on the same charges once or several times before.

Why does bootlegging continue to flourish in this state? ATU agents say it is because many people sympathize with men who are in this kind of business. "And that's the reason it's so difficult to get information on the bootlegger and his operation," one said.

With the cooperation of all the people, the agents agreed that bootlegging could be wiped out.

But, they conceded, that day is a long way off.

Stock Mart Registers More Gains

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks made further recovery progress in the early dealings today, paced by gains of a point to two in the electronics.

The improvement included gains around two points in Litton Industries, International Business Machines, Minneapolis — Honeywell and Texas Instruments.

Some of the chemicals showed declines—as much as a point in DuPont and Allied.

Motors were firm for the most part. American Motors, up over a point initially, fell back to the previous close.

Steels were narrowly mixed. Among non - ferrous metal, Miami Copper gained a point and Reynolds Metals 1½.

Crowley Death Linked To Liquor, Sedatives

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Joseph P. Crowley's death was accidental, the result of a combination of liquor and sedatives, a coroner says.

Crowley, a businessman and former Yale football star, was recently acquitted of manslaughter charges by a Tokyo court in the death of his brother-in-law and business associate, T. A. D. Jones Jr., 45. Crowley died Sunday, his 50th birthday, when he was alone at home. His wife and three children were at their summer home in nearby Madison.

County Coroner James J. Corrigan said Tuesday examination showed Crowley had taken about seven sleeping pills, and he estimated from the amount of alcohol in the blood that Crowley might have taken eight or 10 drinks.

A person could probably take 10 or 15 sleeping pills without the dose being fatal, the coroner said, and the alcohol level in Crowley's blood was not high enough to get him arrested on a drunken driving charge.

Corrigan said that while the combination of liquor and barbiturates was dangerous, he was surprised that it proved fatal.

"But it was perfectly possible," he added, "because of fatigue, tension and other factors Crowley's system was not as tolerant as it normally would have been."

"At this time I am calling the death accidental," he said, adding that there will be further toxicological reports but he didn't expect them to change the ruling.

Crowley was acquitted June 22 by a three-judge court in Tokyo of charges of inflicting fatal injuries on Jones during an argument in their hotel room. The defense maintained Jones was injured accidentally when he fell.

The two men had gone to Tokyo to look at oil tankers. Crowley was executive vice president of the T. A. D. Jones Co., a fuel firm here.

Besides his widow and children, Crowley leaves a brother, Robert, a Milwaukee attorney.

Teen-Ager Calls Self 'Superman'

Three weeks ago, on three nights, swastikas were smeared on two synagogues in Columbus, Ga., and 160 paintings were burned in a bonfire in a museum of art. Following this vandalism, an 18-year-old boy was arrested. Following is the first of three dispatches based on an interview.

By ED ROGERS

COLUMBUS, Ga. (UPI) — A Georgia teen - ager awaiting trial for allegedly setting a $30,000 museum fire and smearing swastikas on two synagogues has the notion he is a pre-destined Nazi-type leader.

Edward Vernon Smith Jr., 18, is being held under $25,000 bond for trial on Aug. 17 on charges of burning 160 works of art in the museum fire on July 18, and defacing two Jewish houses of worship.

Police, in announcing the boy's arrest and confession 56 hours after the fire, branded him a "known hater of persons of the Jewish faith and an avid follower of the Nazi doctrines of Adolf Hitler."

A private psychiatrist judged the boy to be mentally ill more than a year ago. The family sought to have him admitted to the state mental hospital at Milledgeville, but the hospital would not accept a person under 18.

The medical judgment was based on the boy's rebelliousness and apparent emotional disturbance.

German Superman

In the first news interview since his arrest, young Smith unveiled "Victor Schmidt," as he privately names himself — a Nazi ubermensch or "superman."

The tall, blond youth, slender as a reed and appearing just as fragile, talked with a United Press International reporter in the waiting room of the Muscogee County jail.

The jail looks like a modern hospital except for the tastefully painted green bars. Smith, who spends his time reading, wore coveralls that fitted like a sack dress.

"I believe there are certain select classes of individuals who are destined to be leaders of the world—not the masses," said this boy who is known in his family circle in Atlanta as "Junior."

"I believe in a hierarchy of race. I believe there are different degrees of inferiority between the races."

The bespectacled boy said he got these beliefs, if anywhere, from the writings of Houston Stewart Chamberlain, an Englishman, and of Friedrich Nietzsche, German philosopher.

These writings are credited by historians with having inspired the doctrines of Hitler and his Nazi followers that the Germanic race is a super race. (Smith's mother is of Austrian ancestry.)

Followed Belief

Does Smith "identify" himself with this super race? With a shy smile he nodded "yes."

Other evidence of the boy's imagined role of "Victor Schmidt" existed before police found someone had made a bonfire of paintings in the Museum of Arts and Crafts here.

Smith moved here, where relatives live, to work as a library page some time after being expelled from Murphy High School in Atlanta for rebelling at compulsory ROTC.

His father, an electronics expert, and his mother, a professional nurse, said they knew he did not like Jews and Negroes but believed his objections to ROTC proved he "hated violence."

Boy Will Submit To Arson Charges

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP)—An 18-year-old library page boy will plead guilty Friday to charges of setting a $30,000 fire in an art museum and scrawling swastikas on Jewish synagogues, authorities say.

Khrushchev Invited To See U. S. Bases

porters to their seats and said with a grin that holding a news session here was one way of getting them to see the famous Civil War battlefield.

In view of his upcoming trip to Europe and the exchange of visits with Khrushchev, the main thread of the conference was foreign affairs and foreign policy.

Other Subjects

But on other subjects, the President had this to say:

POLITICS — Eisenhower decried anything that might have the appearance of establishing a political dynasty in the United States as the worst thing that could happen to a political party. That was in response to a question as to whether he would consider his younger brother, Dr. Milton Eisenhower, president of the Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore, excellent material for the Republican vice presidential nomination.

Eisenhower refrained from expressing any personal preference for a GOP presidential nominee from among nine or ten persons he has said might be qualified.

If the right kind of nominee is picked, he said, he will do all he can to assure his election by pitching into the 1960 campaign. The President said he does not regard his role in the selection of a nominee as that of exercising veto power over someone who might not be satisfactory to him in terms of foreign and domestic policy.

Views Unchanged

STEEL — Eisenhower said he has not changed in the slightest his attitude that the federal government should not intervene in the steel strike, four weeks old today. He said he has noted some suggestions in print that the strike would have to be settled before Khrushchev's visit to the United States next month. He said we would welcome Khrushchev to see this as a freedom-loving place, to see that people are free to strike.

Eisenhower did say, however, that democracy is strongest when there is cooperation among groups rather than strikes.

HOUSING — A hint developed that the President might be willing to split some of his differences with Congress on housing legislation. He said that he does not by any manner of means contend that housing legislation must conform in every detail to his own desires or convictions.

Bill Priorities

CONGRESS — A reporter said Congress is getting ready to go home and asked what priorities Eisenhower has in mind for legislation to be enacted before adjournment.

With a chuckle, the President asked hopefully whether his questioner had any authority for the first part of his statement. Then he said he believes it is vital to this country to have an adjustment in the law limiting the interest rate on government bonds because the soundness and prosperity of the country demand this. He added to his list what he termed a reasonable labor bill to stop secondary boycotting and blackmail picketing, action to finance a continuation of the federal interstate highway program on a pay-as-you-go basis so the cost won't be foisted on our grandchildren, and finally a sound civil rights bill.

Then the President added that this wasn't an all inclusive list.

Keeping Records

FUTURE — The President disclosed he is keeping full records of this era in history in which he has occupied the White House, and expects to preserve many of them in the Eisenhower library at his old home town, Abilene, Kan.

With a laugh, Eisenhower said a general once told him that after retirement he was going to sit on the porch six weeks and after that begin to rock slowly. But Eisenhower said for his part, he will have an interest in the vital things that are going on every day. He said it is most important that the people be educated, more important than doing things of a special nature, such as taking trips abroad.

Previously, Eisenhower had said he would like to travel after he leaves the White House in January 1961, to Latin America, Africa, Asia, and places he hasn't been before. Now he seemed to be saying he might want to take a hand in seeing to it that the people have a knowledge of the world around them and a better understanding of it.
