Home To Roost

Defense Strike Coddling Pays First Dividend Today

President Roosevelt's strike-coddling defense lines seems to be paying its first dividend today. For a number of days the Administration has adhered to a consistent policy of encouraging labor to strike.

The needs for today's plant structure were sworn in the Government's tolerance of the General Motors strike in Detroit, at the Chrysler Corporation's nearly-prolonged strike and in the violence around the Allis-Chalmers plant.

The showdown had to come. It has come. The labor's right to strike, not anything to do with preserving the defense machinery by the New Deal.

Syrian Stake

Quick British Victory In Mandate Is Imperative

In a few hours, or at the most a few days, the world will know how firmly the Vichy French have bound themselves to Germany.

As the French report today, their forces in Syria resist the British invasion to the limit, then the democracies must accept a bitter blow.

City's Loss

Salvation Army's Bivans Has Been a Highly Useful Citizen

Major John Bivans has made himself the most accommodating, helpful part of the Charlotte community since the Salvation Army sent him here in 1938.

What Goes Up...

Stars Fall on Alabama In a Valdese Juke Joint

We doubt if Alabama Pitts said, "Hey, hey, this dance?" when he went to look on a girl dancing in a juke joint in Valdese, Alabama.

Guessing At Steel

By Hugh S. Johnson

The inadequacy of the steel industry in the presence of the increased estimates of requirements for national defense is a new and serious situation.

Cops' Holiday

Let Them Take Off While the Court Catches Up With Cases

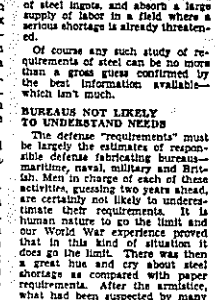

We are quite sure that we could get some local police departments, Chief Jorner and Chief Lineberry, to fall in with this little suggestion.

Could Be Worse

Norfolk Virginian-Pilot

The alarm over a prospective gasoline shortage is probably unnecessary, with a little determination travelers may be able to make each other just as effectively with bicycles.
