From flying... the home... the year... the Air... later... the flying... Medal... Morris... Fla... high...

With the Atlantic Fleet... newspaper... usually... a home... of a fighting man when you write a story about him.

MOROSCO... give you the name of his birthplace, but not with Comdr. Robert DeConroy Baker, 43, our late-fare aviator.

Son of a handsome mining engineer, he was born on a train between Mexico and Colorado Springs, was educated in England, France and America and lived in half a dozen states before entering the Naval Academy in Annapolis.

Bob is brilliant at stories, told with a ringing lurch. Our center the Japanese Navy during the first part of the incident in China. Bob's ship was anchored with other American ships and 47 Japanese ships near Shanghai.

On the night the mole, "Wings Over Hawaii" was shown aboard Bob's ship. The loud sound effects gave him with the noise of dive bombers. Unaware of the origin of the sound, Japanese gunners and soon all their 47 ships were steering at a plane that wasn't there.

Called Mr. Woo... Mr. Woo, much more suspected him of being an American because of his hair of style.

One night Japanese land planes flew over the island and flashed recognition lights. Mr. Woo, having in advance, was in communication with the noise.

Bob was on a battleship that was headed for the island and headed at Pearl Harbor. His room with all his uniforms were under water. A month after the attack a diver brought them up and Bob reached them to the cleaners. He said he would not have been there if the only things we salvaged from battleship-hood.
