MacArthur

Now Far From Politics
He's Only a Soldier
The case of General MacArthur, the willing political candidate who withdrew his name at the eleventh hour, is almost but not quite completed.

Young Hero

A Scout Life-Saver
Makes Light Of It All
Fourteen-year-old Cecil Sloan of Charlotte, who saved a little girl's life by quick and heroic action, reacts unfavorably to his new status.

What Hero?

Killer Of German Ace Unknown In Records
War in the air is becoming a business, a vast and impersonal operation trading in sudden death and horrible destruction.

Good Sense

Detroit Foremen Quick To Respond To Appeal
It is a cheating development in the labor market struggle during wartime, this surrender of Detroit foremen to General Arnold's word that their strikes have seriously injured the Air Forces program.

Quote, Unquote

NATIONS can only maintain their existence by being prepared to risk it. Power politics, where it is not a mere game, is always inevitably led to warfare.

Quote, Unquote

In a modern economy such as ours must be at all times to sustain the level of the national income to insure that markets are available for everything we can produce and create.

Quote, Unquote

It is good to hear Mr. Kiser speak, because Americans are not interested in the "Land of Opportunity" — never "The Land of Safety."

Quote, Unquote

It has been a long time since I heard a man or woman whistle at work. There is a poem by an unknown author in my scrap book, "Whistle and Hoe," which ends each verse with the refrain, "Whistle and Hoe, sing as you go, short on the row, by the songs you know."

Quote, Unquote

What we carry and nurture in our hearts and minds determines our character, our destiny. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is a man."
