suppose. Senstor McKellar has fought all these years to drag TVA down into politics, to dip its personnel in the pork barrel, to make TVA jobs a part of his patronage busiless. Having so lately failed to hamstring TVA, but still with the chance of making it dependent upon Congress for its operating capital, Sénator McKellar could not restrain himself.

Consider this, and remember: of the whole vast TVA program, the lone attempt to control the life of an American region by government direction, the Senators from Tennessee found nothing to say but that its head man was offensive to them. In the end, they could neither attack nor support the theory of TVA. It boiled down to personal antagonism. Is this the way in which was are to determine the future course of the country?

The space and time lost in the process of telescoping rice simple words into a catchy (?) trade name, and then having to convert it back into plain old English so that it makes ense, is n-ormus (pronounced enormous). For every one that captures public fancy—happy inspirations like SkipPlea and Outdamspot—there are two that don't take and have to be explained patiently over and over again, defeating the very purpose of the merger. And there is a further hazard. We recollect the time we didn't buy a certain odd-named toothpaste for years because we didn't know how to say it.

The knack of coining these names, like

say it.

The knack of coining these names, like the ability to write words for popular sougs, is a failing; not a gift. Remember when golfers stopped sitting their balls on likite mounds of wet sand and began to use wooden pegs? Well, any-how, the first Company to put out those pegs called them Reddy Tees, and that was a pretty good name, though some of them did happen to be yellow. But we knew a fellow who always hankered to get hold of that company so he could change the name. His advertising was going to feature the picture of a pretty cirl golfer teeing up and using—duck!—Her Reddy Tee.

Just what heredity had to do with golf we never did figure out. Probably an in that fellow's family.

After the war there are bound to be, a lot of new products. Let's hope that we can wrecknize em.

The Know-How

The U-Boats came in to give up with jaws still bloody from their kills. In more of the same insensate destructiveness that has characterized the dying moments of the Third Reich, submarine warfare was carried again to the waters off American shores. In the last three weeks of the war two ships, one of them a lowly collier, were torpedoed and sunk. A third was damaged by what the Navy tentatively calls an "underwater explosion."

the Navy tentatively calls an "under-water explosion."
Despite this last gesture of defiance, no sounder defect was administered to any branch of the German military service, not excepting the Luttuetfe, than to the U-boats. After our entry into the war their toil was frightful, raising the gravest apprehensions that we would be able to ferry troops overseas and supply them afterward without an excessive loss in lives and ships and materiel. But little by little the subs were driven from their boiled hunting

Cotton's New Day

The cotton industry, threatened by the war competition post-war competition of new fibers, is not ready to give up. Its representatives gave a most optimistic report before a House committee this week. For one thing, the National Cotton Council revealed a plan to collect and spend $1,000,000 a year on advertising and research. That may not be cough for the manimoth task shead—but it's five times marching before the property and the property of the p mammoth talk shead—but It's Itve times anything previously spent.

For another thing, it was revealed hast the Commodity Credit Corporation, without reducing cotton prices, had cut sown the surplus by about five million heles, leaving the market in much better shape. And leatly, A. L. M. Wiggins, Hartwille's nationally prominent bankes, reported that the South, for the first lime, has adequate capital to develop its own industry. He urged that it use that capital, and refrain from calling in outsiders.

The industry, of course, has more bat—

in outsiders. The industry, of course, has more bat-less to fight. There is a good deal of salking to be done yet about wages and working conditions, about efficiency of operation, about new uses for cotton to combat the invasion of other maerials, about new methods of harvesting machine. But the industry, and the by machine. But the industry, and the bouth as well, should have the faith that, by using our own financial resources (now that the industry has been redeemed from New York brokers) and urning in earnest to research, cotton may continue to be a vital force in the life of the region.

Shots In Parting

Kenneth ("Pat" for Patronage) Mc-Kellar and Tom Stewart, the Senators from Tennessee, saw that they couldn't whip David Lilienthal, and so they just whip David Lilienthal, and so they just called him names at the eleventh hour, prepared to vote against him, and turned to other business. The decision of the Senate is likely to be that Mr. Lilienthal, having built TVA into a mammoth and most effective enterprise, lighly deserves the chance to carry on for inte more years. The gentlemen from Tennessee were not out of order, but they were distinctly in the minority. And to those who have been wondering just why Tennessee's Senators stood so stoutly against Mr. Lilienthal and the whole of TVA, the final outburst was revealing. The two gentlemen said of Director Lilienthal:

"He is personally and politically obsame of the result hourprepared to vote against him, and turnprepared to vote against him. Line a manmoth and most effective enterprise,

The Relation Of The Church And Labor

To 18 the function of any institution concerned seriously with the welfare and stability of a society to inquire into the second of the second out formers, and now of necessity, they must embrace the country of the political point of view of justice.

Now there is one area of our life toward which Christian people have been allogether too ignorant and too casual. The Labor Movement is one of the great movements of the modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world. The society's most modern world, and organized labor is one of society's most modern world. Whether we like it of the volume, "Labor and Tomorrow's-World." Whether we like it of not, whether we like it is one, it is not the control as well as the conomic affairs of our people. It is not the labor is walking. Maybe the world as the conomic affairs of our people. It is not use pretending that it is just there.

Morrower, the power of Labor is waking. Maybe the world is no use pretending that it is just the control of the conomic affairs of our people. The world is not used to stay. When it was reported to Carlyle that some flippent mind had reached the momentous conclusion to "naceput the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to drink the precepts of the natural world. A man may wish to have any vital and the process of the natural world. of the Kingdom of Christ. And yet the facts of these truths are incomposed. As churchmen, we are indifferent to them are bound to do peril and to the dishonor of the work we are bound to do peril and to the dishonor of the work we have been as churchmen as the control of the most of the work as the dishonor of the importance of the moster for us, as churchmen as with as a citizens, the questions as careless of the development of this work as it is apparent it has been during the past few years. For one thing, the Church has been predominantly a capitalistic society as a churchmen as careless of the development of the work as it is apparent it has been during the past few years. For one thing, the Church has been predominantly a capitalistic society and the property of the past of the past of the control of the church has dead of money to implement its program, and money covers only from those who have it. Probably more than we realize extremely large gifts of very wealthy men to, the benevolehi program of the Christian Church have done much albor matters. Business and religibn were not to be maded. By tacit agreement the Church took the tithe of wealth, and after againg "thank you" turned a man free to pursue his vocation according to the habits of time. It is said for a sceeping a contribution from the openior of a saloom in a town where he was holding a service. He repilled to the incite with these words. "The devil has had the money a long time, and he has put it to bad use; I am now going time, and he has put it to bad use; I am now going purpoer." There is reasonableness in the idea, but when the purpoer. There is reasonableness in the long, but the point of vecepting the gift for a good cause when by the acceptance the Church may lose its honor among a society desporately crying for the weal that the Goopel can be the point of vecepting the gift for a good cause when by the acceptance the Church may lose its honor money a society desporately crying for the weal that the Goopel can be the point of veceptin ness. Not malice but conviction has dictated the attitude, and therein is our peril.

II.

That this is the Issue at stake is certainly evident to any scrious insurier. The problem, plainly put for us, especially here in our land, is this: Is the Labor Movement to be approached by the Christian leaders with the hope that it may be guided away from the paganism of the labor revolutions of the European continent? The story of the boiling caldron of European continent? The story of the boiling caldron of European continent? The story of the boiling caldron of European continent? The story of the Christian of the risk of the worker, in some areas their ascendancy of the risk of the worker, this you have dead of Christianity. Russia became anti-Christian. Germany become anti-Christian.
