The Law At Work

Justice, yea, is the mainstay of democracy, and the law is the ally of respectable people, yea, and still that bort of stuff. But as fine as these institutions may be, they function through mere in-dividuals, even as you and we, and sometimes the result is not only currious, but curlously stupid or curiously lax or curriously tragic.

curiously stupid or currousy iax or curiously trapic.

For an example combining the stupid and the tragic, take the case of the night policeman of the town of Aberdeen, N. C. He was chasing a metorist specific form of the control o

A New Tune

We may have reason for concern over the new party line of American Communists, but it appears that we have nothing to lear from the Communist Party in Germany. Up to now, at least, the control of the Communist Party in Germany. Up to now, at least, and the control of Germany in the Soriest system is not for Germany that Soriest system is not for Germany that Soriest system is not for Germany that Communists and their rich collaborators should be split up and divided among the communists look upon active Nazis and collaborators as the criminals. Men of wealth outside Hitler's party are not to suffer.

The German Communists, in this time, have taken to speaking of democracy. They condemn the German people for permitting Hitler's rise, and their own Party for being unable to weld together 'German's Communist to death of the Communist to death of the Communist to the state of the Communist that the state of the Communist that the state of the Communist the state of the Communist that the communist that the state of the Communist that the community that the community that the community We may have reason for concern over

The line, you see, is still confused, and at the moment, so far as we're concerned, the Moscow-inspired Communists of Berlin are leading the way toward closer accord among the United Nations, and setting up a pattern for Germany that is not half bad.

Too Many People

The Atlantic Charter, it develops, is not complete. And even its own Four Freedoms can't be realized without the addition of another: Freedom From Penalth

People.

At the moment diplomats of 50 nations were scratching their names on the United Nations Charter a group of physicians and social scientists in San Francisco thundered this message. In an alarming book these men suggested that the world is too full of us for peace. It is their theory that world population, increasing by 2000,000 each year, threatens the ruin of all. Already, they note, the earth cannot adequately support the people of the world. Thus there will always be miscry—and war—unless we take steps to control population.

The 2200,000,000 souls now on earth may increase to twice that number within 35 years, with the result that the value of human life will hit a new low, democracy will vanish, 'and the hungry, inarticulate masses will be ridden by tyronny and war." The one alternative, say the scientists is to reduce the birth rate through birth control, thirtening of marriage requirements, sterilization. At the moment diplomats of 50 na-

We'll confess we'd never pondered upon this problem, though we haven often come to the conclusion that there were too many people, of one sort or another, in our world. It isn't difficult to see that there may eventually be more people than our present system can support, but we can't believe that the race won't finally hit upon some superior means of supporting [886]. We recall don't forget the head of the U. 8. Patent Office who advised, back in 1994, that the Office be closed, on the ground that there was nothing left to be invented.

We can't believe that the deading of the total the the declainy of

We can't believe that the destiny of the race lies in the development of birth control methods.

Lend-Lease, East

The tshort Japs, as they say in Siberian Russia tshort is a strong ency word universally applied to the Japaness—a stronger version of the old Damuyankee, we supposely, are not surprised to learn that Lend-Lease weapons of war are pouring into Siberia. North of the Amur River the Independent

Into this region Lend-Lease goods have been pouring since 1942, brought in by Russian ships from the West Coast, They have given new muscle to General Apanasenko's armies, replaced the old wood-gas burning tanks, supplied many more than the original twelve armored divisions. These weapons went to veterant troops (for some years the Banner Armies have bosted 70 big divisions of 20,000 men each—and all have had four and a half years of intensive training). These troops were blooded in the battles of Changkineng and Nomothed and the state of the side of the Japanese could scarcely have overlooked the flow of cargoes from America, and their 55 crack divisions along the Siberian border are evidence that they have not been oblivious to the possibility of invasion from the North.

The public announcement by Mr. Crowley rised a question, however. These shipments are being made, he said, because our military advantage" to the United States, the suggested that they are not been oblivious to the possibility of invasion from the North.

On April 2 this column told how Army advocates of a big land army and peacetime concernion had got bins about three months ago and drew up plans whereby the air force would be reduced to the same sone it was in 1808—about 18,000 min. On the same day this column was published General Hap Arnold, by pure coincidence, submitted a violent protest against this Selectionized air set-in, Arnold used language which only be can use to warm that the U. S. would be in for disaster if we did not keep a big air force and allow money for developing new types of planes, but selections.
