et 'Em Earn It '

We are not at all opposed to the struggle in behalf of the millennium. We, too, tremble in Joy as we anticipate the reventual establishment of the brother-hood of man. We, too, dream of a day when human animostiles shall pass away, and man shall become less the energy creature of earth and more the noble soul of the upper sphere. We, too, yearn for the erasure of national boundaries which set us apart for conflict. We in short, will not, stand in the way of the second Eden.

And we're not disposed to look upon our erstwhile enemies, the Italians, as uanimously and irrevocably evil. We enjectian no scheme for ostracting them foreyer. Eventually, we'd like to see them brace up seven if we have to help) and become again a race of men. But we regard the House Foreign Affairs Committee as hasty and a little reckless.

We suspect that this won't sit well with combat veterans who had to face Italian lead and steel in Tunkis and Sielly. And though it will echo a democratic principle of equality and forgiveness, we suspect it won't sit well with ordinary Americans, either.

The Hallan population; if you will, was captive under Mussolini, bift it is inaccurate to suggest that the majority despised il Duce, and sought to deny his leadership. The House of Savoy, if you please, was not in command in the dark years of Fascism, but only the most af-

years of Fascism, but only the most af-fable would maintain that the men of

Table would maintain that the men of Eavoy were aught else than craven weaklings, truckling to the new power. And Italy, at this moment, seems to us unfit for United Nations member-ship. Torn asunder economically, social-ity and politically, and with a genera-tion of international lawlessness behind her, she seems a poor risk to us. And, once she is in the fold, who will guaranner, sue seems once she is in the fold, who will guarantee that some wide-eyed man of peace will not be pleading that Germany, the poor misfed Reich, be also admitted? And there's another prospect in the fast about Japan? She'd make a great little ally, hey?

All Or Nothing

Now the Senate is about to go to the max with the United Nations charter, and the Constitution of Constitution self. Onlo's Taft has taken a strong stand, and says he will fight for amending the charter so that the delegate's property of the strong the charter so that the delegate's property of the same strong standard the same strong standard the President's power over the armed forces. One of the recevations voted by the Senate to the League Covenant in 1919 reserved power over Army and Navy to Congress. But as Commander-in-Chief many Presidents shave used military force in an emergency without a declaration of war; at Vera Cruz in 1914, the Villa expedition in 1916, intervention in Russia in 1918, war on Nazi subs in our waters in 1940.

It is agreed, we suppose, that the United Nations cannot hope to keep the peace unless they are free to use amed force at any momnt, against aggressors real or potential. And however cautiously we may eye the vast war powers proposed for our delegate, we must remember that this is the crux of the matter, this use of armed forces on short notice. If the Senate should renece on this, we will have taken a long chance.

An Overnight Job

A subject not much to our taste is the FEPC. We'd rather, by far, leave the durned thing alone and go on about our business of spreading sweetness and light. And as far as this region is con-business of spreading swertness and light. And as far as this region is concerned, there isn't much use in taking it upon the same that the FEEC had on the South that most of its people don't even know that the initials stand for Fair Employment Practices Committee, Much less are they concerned at the battle now raging in Congress to give the FEPC a permanent standing, or at least an extended life. Southerners may remember, vaguely, that President Truman came out for making it permanent, but they probably figured that, in deference to the memory of the late President Roosevelt, he almost had to, and likely didn't Intend to be taken too seriously. But suppose he should be? The issue of FEPC is not going to be decided by the traditional Southern racial views, either in Congress or out. But if by the votes of Congressmen from other regions the agency should be given a firm lease on official life, the South would be the altimate refort in which the clement of idealism was subjected to the heat of realism.

by strring up antagonian toward it and by Southern members of Congress, who are antagonistic toward it for their own reasons—but by others who may be unfavorably disposed toward bureaucracy in any form cand FEPC would be naked bureaucracy in any form cand FEPC would be naked bureaucracy in who had pet antagonisms of their own or who might be converted against FEPC for any reason. And among the arguments Mr. Favin has, made with considerable heat is this, that the FEPC would have the authority to require not only that private employment be given without discrimination because of race or creed or color, but in the case of certain contractual relationships with the Federal Government, public employment which Mr. Ervin asserts would fall within that category is schools.

Well, we dislike to have to say it, but Well, we dislike to have to say it. Dut it decidedly would not do to require that North Carolina, for example, employ school teachers for its white children without discrimination because of race or creed or color. It wouldn't do, North Carolina has the best of feelings for and intentions toward its Negro citizens, as shown by the fact that Negro school teachers are paid the same as and intentions toward its Negro citizens, as shown by the fact that Negro school teachers are paid the same as white teachers, shown in other ways as well. But it has manifested no disposition to relax the segregation of Negro and white children in its schools. It could hardly be expected to piace Negro teachers over white children, as Mr. Ervin says could be done under the FEOD bill, nor would Negro teachers themselves like the idea.

The subject, as we say, is a distasterial one, and we would prefer to leasible, acceptable methods of bringing the Negro forward, and for better understanding between the races. But what else is there to do except take it up when elements in Congress propose to abolish age-old customs overnight, all by passing a little law?

ODT says the new order will result in the transfer rof 900 Pullmans. Even with the increase of returning troops—far above the schedules given to the railroads only six weeks ago—this should help a great deal. It will, of course, work a hardship on some who must still stayed. There are reasons of life and death that council need to set only overcrowded trained.
