Strike Flood

Strike Flood

If the Bureau of Labor Statistics intends to keep tab of the man days lost in sirkes from here on in. It must lay to immediately. We are upon the golden era of the strike as an inclustrial weapon. It is one are upon the golden era of the strike as an inclusival weapon. It is one are with a day of the strike as a lay of the strike ended that another breaks out. Considering everything, there are few men involved. We work up to a high of about 50,000 men out on strike, then drop down to 25,000—then soar up-wards again. And students of the labor movement profess to see a new kind of force at work in the strike epidemic. They say that what the workers are after now—even if subconsciously—is security. Even thought they strike ostensibly for better wares and hours, they are supposed to be after long-term security. That is shown by demands for an annual wage, for welfare funds. And some of labor's closect friends say even that the demand for security; they say, too, that labor yants shorter hours because they mean more lobe.

security they say, too, meaning shorter hours because they mean more jobs.

About that we can't say. It seems to us that labor might be looking for security gains in this period because the War Labor Board has blocked the way to higher wares. Perhaps the boys are taking only what they can pel, and haven't changed their strategy but only before the same of the same

'Shiners Beware

The boys in the Malamute salous had best be careful how they whoop it up now that the district attorney in Judge Yates Web's Federal court is to be that stalwart. Prohibitionist, Lawyer D. E. Henderson, When this court remues, the United Drys will be in session. Is it merely a coincidence that Semi-tor Hoey, who controls the district attorney appointment, should select someone of the same school of demonology as his kinsman? Federal court has, of course, no jurisdiction over the boys in the back room. In the case of liquor, what it has to inforce is the revenue laws, not the moral laws, Judge Webb manages nontheless to put into the proceedings a rood deal of rightens indirected in the processing of the court application which gives his court a pluguant character of its own and makes defendants on moonshining charges exceedingly wary of it.

Now with D.A. D.E. Henderson to con-Now with D.A. D.E. Henderson to contribute from the floor some measure of the zest which Judge Webb dispenses from the bench, liquor-making and liquor-tunning in the Western District of North Carollina face an unhappy day in zourt. Maybe that was in the mind of Senator Hory, binnell a charter Prohibitional, Maybe they're zoint to try to prove that Prohibition will work.

Full-Speed Max

You could've closed your eyes while Max Gardner was speaking in Spindale the other south and machined that you were learned Henry Wallace, or maybe even one of the increme, from PAC. The Governor was speaking powerfully of full emphagment, and if that doesn't mean much, he was saying that American houses, in the years alread would speaking, and that this country must forget its old ways. He was promising that our national income of the future would make a kind of laughing stock of those who are now fretting over the size of our national debt.

size of our national debt.

North Carolina, we suppose, need in have been surprised. O. Max has always been a full employment man, in a way, He practiced mass production in bushness, and pushed it in business and agriculture as Governor. He's always been closely identified with the conservative Democratic order in North Carolina, but he has a suppose the control of the conservative Democratic order in North Carolina, but closely identified with the conservative Democratic order in North Carolina, but he hasn't been counted among the forces of reaction. And since he's been in Washington his expressions have become almost liberal.

In this instance, however, it is not his ideology which is at stake. As chairman of the advisory board of War Mebilization & Reconversion, he was speaking the sentiment of a hopefully optimistic business man. He was looking beyond the period of converting to civilian production, and daring the surmise, that our wast production potential which has been mobilized for war can be useful in peace. He suggested that there was no reason for a relapse, for, an economy of scarcity. He envisions a time when the goods will pour forth from American plants in peace at the same incredible rate we have seen in war.

And he proposes that the country ward account the challenge or meet with rate we have seen in war.

And he proposes that the country must accept this challenge or meet with disaster. Already under the heavy shadow of a 300 billion dollar debt, the nation cannot expect to carry on with a pre-war economy. Income, he expects, will stick at about 125 billions—and we'll stick at a carry the load and move on into a better, faster, more prosperous world,

You Say Equal?

The ladies, who now spend only 85 per crut of the nation's budgets, are striking for equality. They want the other 15 per cent by now, they've reached the Congress, and inside the House Judiciary Committee a furious Hense Juddelary Committee a unions somabile is brewing. Momentons, issues are at stake.

There's a report, you might as well know, suggesting legislation for an equal rights amendament to the Constitution, we don't know quite how they'd word R: Bittly something varue and indefinite directing that all joint bank aeromits become Madam's, and specifying that all pay checks be made payable to her alone, At any rate, the thing's gone that far, adone. At any rate, the thing's name that far.

There are a couple of thought schools here One holds that this newtangled civil right for the women folks is necessary to half discribination in lower wages, and their exclusion from some jobs (they want to go a step beyond widding and steamfitting). The other holds that this thing is loaded. It is suggested that such an amendment might, while promotine, equality, remove woman's traditional protection. Not only would they be forced to stand in crowded busses without recourse to the seat of the equalized male; they might never again be bowed first into revolving doors, or expect to see hats doffed in clerators. Less important, vital health laws protecting woren might be removed; women might become equally liable for family support—or be forced to pay admony. Heaven, if you'll pardon us, forbid.

One Congressman, Hobbs of Alabama as good Democrati was outraged. He foreast the ruination of American as good Democrati was outraged, the loss of property rights. He thought Congress should view this proposal with horror. Congress will, beyond a doubt, the holdsquered gentlemen will be assailed on one safe by a passed of vinumen sereaming for the rest of the national wealth, and on the other by a clannor for an even more shelfered life for the deadly sex, we cont see it. If they aim to be realiste about this in Wachington they might best the drums for eigent new might best the drums for eigent reter for creatifying the satuation. There are a couple of thought schools
