

THE CHARLOTTE NEWS

THOMAS L. ROBINSON
J. E. DOWD
B. R. GRIFFITH
G. A. MCNEIL

Publisher
General Manager
Executive Editor
Editor

SATURDAY, JANUARY 21, 1950

LIGHTHOUSE HARRY RIDES AGAIN

M. JAMES F. BYRNES of South Carolina, a former Senator, Supreme Court Justice, assistant President, and Secretary of State, has now received his come-uppance. He is not a person, than the President of the United States, Harry S. Truman. Asked at his press conference this week what he thought about Byrnes' running for Governor of South Carolina, the President replied that Mr. Byrnes was a free agent to do as he damn pleased about running for office.

Though a President's remarks may not be put in permanent marks without express authorization, the unvarnished report of his words by the news services reveals precisely what the President said. The language was unbecoming in him, not so unbecoming, to be sure, as the S. O. R. he runs on Drew Pearson, but proper way to speak of a patriot and former associate like Byrnes.

The unnecessary coarseness or ribaldry, of the President's language probably will make a hell of a lot of difference to Jimmy Byrnes. Long ago, he took the measure of this other one, and probably had him down in his book ever since as a whirling lightweight.

It came to a head at the Conference of Foreign Ministers in Paris in 1946. Truman, new to the Presidency and bewildered, had turned to Byrnes to see him through the critical situation, nothing more. Byrnes, with Davis, Moffett, and Bissell, were in Paris taking a tough line with the Soviets and doing his best to make them understand.

WINSTON NEWSMEN RING THE BELL

WHERE was joy and singing, doubtless, in the newsrooms of the Twin City this morning—and in other newspaper circles of the State an agreeable nodding of heads in recognition that things were well.

The Winston-Salem Journal's Roy Thompson had copped both the North Carolina Press Association's spot reporting and feature honors (and a $100 to boot) for his six-article series "Francis Duvall Smith and the 'Butter-and-Eggs' Lottery."

Very, the one-man editorial staff of the Winston-Salem Sentinel, afternoon sister of the blithe Journal, had beat out two prize-winning editorialists: one on Winston-Salem's public housing and slum clearance program and the other (third prize) on tuition increases.

Thompson, by the way, had captured the laurels that last year graced the crown of the New York Post, which won the 1949 award for the best news story of the year.

Mr. Thompson's top entry this year, which did not win, was his excellent study of the peculiar mating habits of a swan named Elmer, a study that captured front page space on metropolitan newspapers throughout the country last summer.

Readers of The News-Salem and Ivey: congratulations. Readers of the others: apologies that, for the first time in some years, The News banner wasn't flying in the annual competition and our promise that this year we'll see that it is.

SAFETY FOR MENTAL HOSPITAL PATIENTS

THE prompt action of the State Hospitals Board of Control in asking a fire hazard survey of all buildings at State mental institutions is welcome.

While the Raleigh News-Observer made a thorough investigation of conditions at the State Hospital at Raleigh (and found, by the way, many fire hazards), there has been no indication that other State hospitals have been given the same, much-needed scrutiny.

The investigation has been called, of course, as a result of the disastrous Davenport Institutional hospital fire in which more than 40 helplessly sick inmates were burned to death.

Though a patient has admitted that she started the Davenport fire, it does not exonerate the hospital. Officials of the institution allowed a mental patient to

From the Asheville Citizen

THROUGH LAW TO PEACE

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring): That it should be the sense of the Congress that it should be a fundamental objective of the foreign policy of the United States to support and strengthen the United Nations...to seek its democratic institutions, freedom to associate with nations with defined and limited powers adequate to preserve peace and prevent aggression through the enactment, interpretation, and enforcement of world law. . . .

WHEREVER the words of House Concurrent Resolution 64 and Senate Concurrent Resolution 64, in Washington's 105 Representatives and 21 Senators endorse, political and educational bodies, foundations, to all institutions with defined and limited powers adequate to preserve peace and prevent aggression through the enactment, interpretation, and enforcement of world law. . . .

The list of petitioners includes all the members of the Governor's Council of State; the Attorney General; the leaders stand that we meant business. At home, Henry Wallace was still Secretary of Commerce, and beginning to show the traitorous qualities that later disgraced him.

Wallace was scheduled to make a speech to an assortment of Reds and pinkies in Madison Square Garden. The White House went over the speech and approved it. Wallace delivered his address—and the result was a roar of applause from the crowd from under Byrnes' podium in Paris as though Wallace, the Cabinet member, had used spades and a fire hose.

Byrnes was on the transatlantic telephone immediately, and he put it up to Truman flatly—remind the what the Vice-President had said, or he, Byrnes, would catch the next ship home. Truman responded.

It was first explained that the White House hadn't cleared Wallace's speech before he delivered it, but Wallace cried out that he had stuck to his text, and that for once he was sticking to fact. Well, the White House didn't approve of what he had said, anyway. The furor subsided. The Paris Conference was a dud as it probably would have been if not impeded by official counter-purposes. Byrnes came home and won't long about getting out of that official chair.

And now Truman holds that Byrnes is a free agent and may do as he damn pleases about running for office. Right? But who is this Truman that he has grown so great?

It was first explained that the White House hadn't cleared Wallace's speech before he delivered it, but Wallace cried out that he had stuck to his text, and that for once he was sticking to fact. Well, the White House didn't approve of what he had said, anyway. The furor subsided. The Paris Conference was a dud as it probably would have been if not impeded by official counter-purposes. Byrnes came home and won't long about getting out of that official chair.

And now Truman holds that Byrnes is a free agent and may do as he damn pleases about running for office. Right? But who is this Truman that he has grown so great?

They produced some of the brightest features, some of the most complete news coverage and some of the most forthright crusade the distinguished judges of the NC Press Association might ever hope to see. (Both the Thompsons and Ivey had a stellar effect on the journalism of the rest of the State.

Stalder Journals blossomed with perky "human interest" stories, with hard-hitting editorials. State staffs ranged far and wide to keep tabs on the hinterlands.

The new spirit spread even into the weeklies and semi-weeklies of the State, whose entries in the annual competition were outstanding. The Times Herald, "I say without reservation that this group . . . is the best collection I have ever seen . . .

It may be true that one bad apple can spoil the barrel, but the Winston-Salem papers have proved that a good newspaper can improve all the rest.

To Winston-Salem's Thompson and Ivey: congratulations.

Readers of The News-Salem and Ivey: apologize that, for the first time in some years, The News banner wasn't flying in the annual competition and our promise that this year we'll see that it is.

THE new spirit, however, was also reflected in the rest of the State.

Representative Harold Cooley of North Carolina's Fourth District of leading the fire treasury raid of the new year, and the verbal claxon for Government economy is still ringing.

"Being considered in near-record time behind closed doors of the House Agriculture Committee is a cotton acreage quota bill introduced by Senator Frank H. Baughman of Oklahoma," reported the Associated Press. "The bill, which would give an estimate of the amount of cotton acreage to be limited, was introduced by Senator Baughman on Jan. 10." The bill, which would give an estimate of the amount of cotton acreage to be limited, was introduced by Senator Baughman on Jan. 10.

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's subcommittee which conducted the inquiry into the activities of the military intelligence agency last year, which had originally been presented for the first year, has been submitted to the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence.

Delay was caused by investigations sought by Senator Baughman of the new Congress.

Rep. John T. Connelly of Wisconsin and Karl E. Mundt of South Dakota, confirmed that they felt the original draft of the bill was too hasty. "It may have been a good bill," said Mundt.

President's military aide, "too lightly."

They reported that only a few paragraphs of the lengthy prepared report were referred to General Vaughan's temporary committee.

And the evidence that he had repeatedly interviewed

THE report of Senator Baughman's