New GI Sharpens Shooting Eye At Expense Of Hip-Two-Thrip

All the GIs go out to the ranges on the fringes of Fort Jackson and fire at foxhounds targets over and over, at varying distances. They also hand grenades. (U. S. Army photos).

Russia and Poland served notice they would speak in the 60-nation Peace Committee against such condemnation, and India warned that passage of the U. S. resolution would end its friendly relations with the United States.

The Arab-Asian nations would close the door to a peaceful solution. The Arab-Asian resolution, on which a vote also was scheduled, would set up a seven-power conference to solve Far Eastern problems. Members would be the United States, Russia, Communist China, Britain, France, India and Egypt.

Following submission of this amendment, Poland announced it had to speak against the resolution. The U. S. declared a cease-fire was a military matter and not one to be treated on an international conference.

British, evidently anticipating passage of a similar Korean resolution, asked yesterday for a meeting of the Security Council between the United States and the British. British Delegate Sir Gladwyn Jebb said the resolution would prevent any future crisis of U. N. resolution since the U. N. charter is not ready to be amended.

FORT JACKSON, S. C. Up on a knoll, not far from Patton Stadium, are the barracks of the Eighth Division's 25th Infantry Regiment, and second in line, between Companies A and C, are the ground-up buildings of Baker Company.

Baker's buildings, like those of the other infantry regiments, are in single file, starting with the mess hall, then the day room, two two-story barracks, then the orderly room and supply room, with two more barracks back of that.

On the wall of First Sgt. Edward Gartin's desk in the orderly room is a sign, "Be good, be quiet or be gone." The regulars of the company are hanging around there, and those few who do come in all seem to have frost in their noses.

Profits Curb Sellers Considered Price Control Goal Of Plan

By HAROLD W. WARD
WASHINGTON—(AP)—A plan to control prices by limiting profits was under Government study today while wage stabilizers pressed for their first major policy statement designed to free large blocs of wage earners from the pay freeze of last week.

The plan D'Salle said he thought would limit profit margins all along the line from manufacturer to retailer. The first step would be to set price ceilings at the highest level between Dec. 19 and Jan. 25, when wages were sealed at Jan. 25 levels.

Railroad switchmen reported sick today on at least six railroads in the Chicago and Detroit areas, hampering movement of freight cars.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
The "black calls" followed the pattern of a three-day work stoppage in Detroit, where the men reportedly "went wild" and were reported "most switched" — a worker's "long wage dispute" was not reached for comment.

The bill would not carry out a recommendation of a special study committee which said that the State Highway Commission should assume the full cost of building and maintaining all city streets. The State League of Municipalities has suggested that gasoline and auto license taxes be increased to raise the $5,000,000 a year that this would cost.
