A SOMBER DEDICATION

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S Inaugural Address was a dedication, of himself and his office, to leadership of an independent free people...

WAYS TO RAISE TEACHING STANDARDS

EVER SINCE Chancellor E. K. Graham of the Woman's College, criticized present teacher certification requirements in an address to N. C. editorial writers last May, the topic has been widely discussed among educators and in lay circles.

...that encourage productivity and profitable trade. ... Rejection of the insinuation that any race or people are inferior or expendable.

The Voices of Past Presidents

By E. W. KENWORTHY
THE HEART OF THE NEW YEAR TIMES
PRESIDENT EISENHOWER—according to his biographer, John Gunther—read a great deal of history as a boy, but of late years has taken to 'pulp Westerns, the sadder the better'.

Another Challenge Is Met

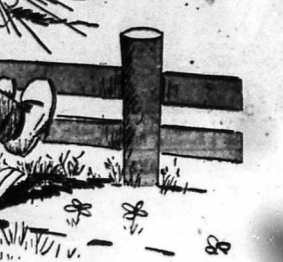

THEN, for the next 70 years came the second great challenge, the new experiment—how to adjust the role of government so as to promote the general welfare in an industrial age.

Republic's Pleasant Coincidence

AND—to jump a long way in time—there is the case of Calvin Coolidge in 1925 trying to win a presidential election on "Economy."

Recognition, At Last, For Us Consumers

IN THE continuing dispute over the relative merits of public and private electric power, we have counted ourselves generally on the side of the privately owned companies.

Coffee-Roasting Generals Due For Roasting By Congressmen

OUR SUBJECT TODAY is the bitter coffee of Rep. Thomas H. Pendergast, who is being roasted by Webster Graves. Mr. Pendergast is—scalding on the military's big budget.

Medal For Harry

ONE of Harry Truman's last visitors before leaving the White House was the war hero Jimmy Doolittle, who presented Truman with a medal commemorating the Wright Brothers' first flight.

Truman Job In Missouri

A HARRY TRUMAN was packing up at the White House yesterday when he was surprised by San Francisco newspapermen who introduced California's new Democratic House members.

Drew Pearson's Merry-Go-Round Sidlights On Truman Department

THE last meeting of the Truman Cabinet was probably the most relaxed and congenial in all its somewhat turbulent history. The President himself said little.

After all you've been through you deserve a rest, Mr. President," said Mrs. "I hope you'll be able to get it easy."

"I'm afraid not," grinned Truman. "I've already got one job waiting for me in Congress. I can't get back to it in the Democratic column."

"It's all going to come your way, Harry," he said. "I've got a good thing for you. I've got a good thing for you. I've got a good thing for you."

"Well, it's probably the only thing of value I'll be able to give you," Truman said. "I'll be glad to give you anything that gets you out of town."

"You've given me many honors," said Doolittle. "I want to return the favor by presenting this medal."
