A GREAT NATIONAL CALAMITY.

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN!

Attempted Murder of Secretary Seward And His Son.

The startling, dreadful, absolutely paralyzing intelligence reached us last night, amid the gloom of midnight, that the President of the United States and his chief Secretary, and the latter's son, had all been stricken down by the hands of assassins, the President instantly beyond human mercy of recovery, and the two latter dangerously wounded, whilst totally unsuspecting and unconscious of danger.

The magnitude of these high crimes, the lofty position of the victims, and the grave consequences likely to flow from the diabolical deeds,affecting, it may be, the future destinies of the country, shock and appall us, and must awaken in every breast the most melancholy forebodings. Time to express fully ask themselves is it possible that a Republic, born, nurtured and reared in an age of civilization and Christianity can hold within its bosom men capable of the direst crimes which blot and disgrace the pages of history during the worst epochs of the world?

But we have not, at the very late hour at which we write, time to say all that the momentous events, and the grief they cause us, that detestation all right thinking people must feel towards such fiendish acts demand. All the terrible details, so far as ascertained, are fully set forth in our news columns, and to them the reader will naturally turn with eager interest.

We can only now express the earnest hope that this untoward and most unexpected event may not bring upon our already afflicted country other calamities, and that prudence and moderation may rule the hour.

By Constitutional provision, Hon. Andrew Johnson, Vice President, becomes the head of the United States, and of him, undeswuch extraordinary circumstances, the highest exercise of firmness and wisdom is demanded.

MOST HORRIBLE!

PRESIDENT LINCOLN ASSASSINATED

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Lincoln was shot to-night, and is mortally wounded.

[SECOND DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON, April 14.—President Lincoln and wife, together with other friends, this evening visited Ford's Theatre, for the purpose of witnessing the performance of the "American Cousin." It is not definitely known at this hour of the papers that General Grant would also be present, but such gentlemen had been booked to take train of cars for New Jersey.

The change was generally crowded, and everybody seemed delighted with the scene before them. During the third act, and while there was a temporary pause for one of the actors to enter, a sharp report of a pistol was heard, which merely attracted attention, but subsequently, when all was hushed, a man rushed to the front of the President's box, waving a long dagger in his right hand, and exclaiming "Sic Semper Tyrannis," and immediately leaped from the box, which was in the second tier, to the stage, and escaped behind scenes.

The screams of Mrs. Lincoln first disclosed the fact to the audience that the President had been shot, when all present rose to their feet, some rushing toward the door, many exclaiming, "Hang him!" "Hang him!" The excitement was of the wildest possible description, and of course there was an abrupt termination of the theatrical performances.

There was a rush towards the President's box, when cries were heard of "Stand back!" "Stand back!" "Give him air!" "Has any one a stimulant?"

On a hasty examination it was found that the Examiner, which has since thrown the head, above and back of the temporal bone, and lodged in the brain.

He was conveyed to a private house opposite the theatre, and the Surgeon General of the army and other surgeons were sent for to attend to his condition.

On an examination of the private box blood was discovered on the back of the cushioned rocking-chair in which the President had been sitting, also on the partition and the floor. A coarse, single-barrelled pocket pistol was also found.

A military guard was immediately placed in front of the private residence to which the President had been conveyed. An immense crowd soon in front of it, all anxious to learn the condition of the President.

It had been previously announced that the wound was mortal, but all hoped otherwise. The shock to the community was terrible.

At midnight the Cabinet, with Messrs. Senator Sumner and Farwell, Judge Carter, General Ordway, General Meigs, Colonel Hay and a long list of others, and the Surgeon General Barnes and his medical associates, were in the house of death.

The President was in a state of syncope—totally insensible, and breathing slowly, the life seeming from the wound at the back of the head.

The surgeons were using every possible effort of medical skill, and hope was given.

The parting of his agonized family with the dying President is too sad for description.

The President and Mrs. Lincoln did not come to the Theatre until fifteen minutes after 8 o'clock.

Speaker Colfax was at the White House at the time, and the President stated that he was going to the play, although Mr. Lincoln had not been well, and would prefer to have witnessed that Gen. Grant and they were to be present, but Gen. Grant had gone North. He did not wish the disappointment. He also stated that he had appointed, and urged Mr. Colfax to go with them, but that gentleman had previously made an engagement with Mr. Ashman, of Mass, bid him good bye.

When the first rumors of the affair were at his wildest height reports were circulated that the wife of Secretary Seward was murdered. On reaching the gentleman's residence a crowd of the wildest gamuts were found, and it was ascertained that the reports were false as hell.

Everybody was so excited that scarcely an intelligible account could be obtained of the appalling facts are substantially as follows.

About 10 o'clock a man rang the bell and the call being heard answered by a colored servant, he said he had come from Dr. Verdi, Secretary Seward's family physician, with a prescription, and upon some one holding the hand a small piece of folded paper, and saying he wanted to return it to Mr. Seward, the Secretary, as he was entrusted with particular directions concerning the medicine.

He still insisted in going up, although repeatedly told that Mr. Seward was asleep in the chamber. The man finally pushed the servant aside and ran up stairs to the door of Secretary's room, and was there met by Mr. Frederick Seward, who asked the stranger what to see the Secretary, making the same representations as before to the servant.

What further passed in the way of colloquy is not known, but the stranger and Mr. Seward a blow on the head with a silly, severely injuring Mr. Seward, and he is now almost senseless.

The assassin then rushed into the chamber and attacked Major Seward, paymaster U. S. A., and Mr. Hansell, a messenger of the State Department, and two male nurses, disabling them all. Having left the wounded Secretary of State, who was lying in bed in the same room, apparently mortally stabbed in the neck, but severing, it is thought, not the jugular vein, and also cutting the jawbone.

The assassin then rushed down stairs, mounted his horse at the door and rode off before the alarm could be given in the same manner as the assassin of the President.

It is believed that the wound of the Secretary of State are not fatal, nor those of the others, although the blow upon the head of Assistant Secretary are very seriously injured.

Secretary Seward and Secretary Welles and other prominent officers of the government, being members of the same church as Secretary, called at Mr. Seward's house to inquire personally his state, and on the head of the assassination of the President. They remained in the house when the latter awoke he was lying, exhibiting, of course, the most intense grief at the awful deed.

An immense throng speedily gathered in front of the President's house, and a strong guard was also stationed there, many persons scouring the city during the night were brought to his house.

The entire city presents a scene of wild excitement,accompanied with violent expressions of indignation and the profoundest sympathy.

The military authorities have dispatched mounted men in every direction, in order, if possible, to arrest the assassin, while the police authorities are more vigilant for the same purpose.

The simultaneous attacks both on the PRESIDENT and on SECRETARY SEWARD look plain at almost the same hour, two o'clock, that there is a presumption of plan to assassinate both!

Some evidence of the guilt of the party who shot the President are in possession of the police.

Vice-President Johnson is in the city, and his hotel quarters are guarded by troops.

THE PRESIDENT DYING.

WASHINGTON, April 15—3:20 A. M.—The President is still alive, but growing weaker

The ball is lodged in his brain, three inches from where it entered the skull. He remains unconscious, and his condition is utterly hopeless.

The Vice President has been to see him, but all visitors except his Cabinet, his family and a few friends are peremptorily excluded.

Large crowds still continue in the street, as near as the line of guards will allow.

Official Bulletin from Secretary Stanton

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 15, 1865, 1:30 A. M.

Major General Dix:

This evening, about 9:30 P. M., at Ford's Theatre, the President, while sitting in his private box with Mrs. Lincoln, Miss Hawes, and Major Rathbone, was shot by an assassin, who suddenly entered the box and approached behind the President. The assassin then leaped upon the stage, brandishing a large dagger or knife, and made his escape to the rear of the theatre. The pistol ball entered the back of the President's head and penetrated nearly through the head. The wound is mortal. The President has been insensible ever since it was inflicted, and is now dying.

About the same hour, an assasin, whether the same or another, entered Mr. Seward's house, and under pretence of having a prescription, was shown to the Secretary's sick chamber. Seward was in bed, a nurse and Miss Seward with him. The assassin immediately rushed to the bed, inflicted two or three stabs on the throat, and two on the face. The nurse, Seward's son and major were also stabbed. The wounds may not be mortal. My apprehension is that they will prove fatal.

The noise alarmed Mr. Frederick Seward, who was in the adjoining room; he hastened to the door of his father's room, where he met the assassin, who inflicted on him one or more dangerous wounds. The recovery of Frederick Seward is also doubtful.

It is not probable that the President will live through the night.

Gen. Grant and wife were advertised to be at the Theatre this evening, but may not be to Burlington this evening.

The Secretary of War, on which Gen. Grant was present, to-day, the subject of the sta e of affairs and the prospects of speedy peace was discussed. All left the meeting in very cheerful and hopeful, spoke very kindly of Lee, as one who had fought valiantly, and the establishment of government in Virginia.

All the members of the Cabinet, except Mr. Seward, and Gen. Grant, were invited by the President.

I have seen Mr. Seward, but he and Frederick were both unconscious.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

[SECOND BULLETIN.]

The President Still Living—Breathing, though Quite Insensible—Secretary Seward has Expired—Mr. Frederick Seward in a Very Critical Condition—One of the Attendants Fatally Wounded.

WAR DEPARTMENT, April 15—3 A. M.—Major General Dix, New York:—The President still breathes, but is quite insensible, as he has been ever since he was shot. He evidently had not taken any laudanum, but was shot looking on the stage, as he was approached behind.

Mr. Seward has rallied, and it is hoped he may live.

Mr. Frederick Seward's condition is very critical.

The attendant was stabbed through the lungs, and is not expected to live.

The wounds of Major Seward are not serious.

The investigation strongly indicates J. Wilkes Booth as the assassin of the President. Booth left it in the street for the carr of a different person that attempted to murder Mr. Sew ard, but was thrown off.

Chief Justice Cartter is engaged in taking the evidence, and a strong chain of circumstantial evidence is fast accumulating against the murderer. His picture has been found on the road near Washington.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

Lieut. Gen. Grant Hears the Sad News.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—Lieut. General Grant arrived at the Continental Hotel this morning at 8 o'clock, and was breakfasting when the news of President Lincoln at Walnut street wharf was received. Soon after the fact became known.

Proclamation of Gen. Morris—Precautionary Measures.

General Morris, commanding the Middle Department, has issued a proclamation suspending all travel, either by railroad, steamboat or other carrier during the day or night, from the city of Baltimore, in view of the assassination of President Lincoln. By this step it is hoped that if the murderer shall have taken refuge in Baltimore his escape will be easily stopped.

Com. Dornin has the harbor under his charge, and Major Hall has disposed of the armed tug to visit, in conjunction with the revenue cutters, different harbors on the bay to prevent the egress of vessels. Marine wagons will be allowed to enter the city, but no vehicle will be permitted to leave except under permit of the military authorities.

With a view to the preservation of order, all the police force will be under arms, and the civil authorities are taking energetic steps for the same purpose. The whole force is requested to aid the authorities in this laudable design. Parties over three will not be allowed to assemble, and no unnecessary excuse will be arrested by pickets who have been instructed to be firm and military rule will be most rigidly enforced.

Generals Lockwood and Tyler are in the city, and will confer with General Hall. The former has charge of the military forces in and around the city of Washington, and his office is contain the public order. Col. Lawrence, chief of staff, is actively at work, and the greatest vigilance is used by the whole police force out. The Mayor was also promptly informed of the event, and will see to every possible effort of medical skill, and hope was given.

The parting of his agonized family with the dying President is too sad for description.
