he had promised the free will offering, while many patients, as a result of which, he was severely injured, two of them fatally, it is believed, as the result of a bomb explosion at his residence at the South Carolina hospital for the insane at Columbia, S. C., a few days ago. The explosion was 45 paces east of the building, a one-story wooden structure. Many of the patients rushed out of the burning building after being rescued.

Thos. J. Mooney, convicted of murder in connection with the prepared-for-day bomb explosion at his residence, in 1916, has been sentenced to be hanged on an indeterminate date, not less than thirty days nor more than ninety days from May 25th date, at San Quentin prison. Mooney's fate now rests with Governor Stephens, who has a pardon petition before him, and a request from President Woodrow Wilson for executive clemency, based on findings of a Federal commission that questioned testimony contributed to Mooney's conviction. Mooney was convicted in February, 1917. An earlier death sentence was nullified because the appeal was pending when the date set for his execution arrived. The bomb explosion resulted in the death of one woman and the injury of thirty-eight others.
