

YDs May Take Hand In Election Might Oppose "Reform" Slate

Indications today were that the Young Democrats of Charlotte will take an active part in the coming municipal election if the movement among the city's business and professional men and women to draft a slate for Mayor and Councilmen grows enough in strength to seriously threaten established party lines.

While no definite announcement has been made, a qualified spokesman for the Young Democrats is authority for it. The organization of young party men does not consider that the "good government" movement yet has reached proportions which justify viewing with alarm.
