Juvenile Crime: Accent On Prevention

POLICE DEPARTMENT plans to step up the campaign to control juvenile delinquency in Charlotte. The department, along with the community's rapid growth will come new problems, new needs, new social factors to explore. It stands to reason that the scope and activities of the department's youth bureau will have to be broadened if the Queen City is to continue to cope with juvenile delinquency and crime.

The Youth Bureau, under Director Neal Forney, has compiled a significant record of public service since its organization in 1931.

The accent, Mr. Forney consistently emphasizes, is not on arrest and punishment but on prevention. This attitude is sound, realistic and practical. The economy of effective preventive measures is offset by the enormous cost of apprehension, custody and punishment—provides a convincing basis for a larger investment of public funds in this project.

Present plans are to ask that the bureau be increased to seven men. We hope that particular consideration will be given to the addition of personnel with a firm background of education and experience in this highly specialized field. A trained sociologist, for instance, could be put to excellent use on the staff.

Although money cannot buy everything needed for the solution of the delinquency problem—such as a happy home environment and a sense of spiritual values in the family—money can definitely buy some of the instruments and skills that have been tested and can be relied upon to reduce juvenile crime.

The puzzle of delinquency cannot be solved by the Youth Bureau alone, however. This situation calls for the best brains and experience the community can marshal in many fields—the police, courts, schools, churches, correctional institutions, clinics, youth organizations, child and foster care agencies, yes, and even radio, television, movies, newspapers and the press. It is a continuing communitywide challenge.

Passing The Buck To Raleigh

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS who refused to back "home rule" legislation for Mecklenburg shrugged off responsibilities which belong squarely on their political shoulders.

Up for consideration this week was a proposed bill giving the Board of Commissioners authority to set salaries of elected county officials. This power is now being held by the General Assembly—which in actual practice means that Mecklenburg's five-man legislative delegation sets the pay scale.

Commissioner S. S. McNinch urged that the board endorse the proposed bill and send it to Raleigh. But on a roll call vote, only Commissioner Craig Lawing joined Mr. McNinch in support of the measure.

Commissioner Herbert Garrison, who spoke out against the bill, admitted that the present system means "less of a headache for us."

One could hardly dispute the fact that it is much easier to palm off a thorny local problem on a state agency. But the point is that this responsibility—however large—belongs at home. Salaries of local officials should be the concern of solely the local governing body.

There are several reasons for this. First, county commissioners are empowered and directed by law to levy taxes and to appropriate the necessary funds for governmental purposes in a county and should therefore be given the authority to determine in what manner this public money is to be spent. Second, it seems that, inasmuch as commissioners are in direct contact with certain county officials and are to a large extent responsible for the type of services rendered, the board is best qualified to decide what salaries should be paid. Commissioners are certainly better qualified in this respect than state legislators who remain fairly remote from day-to-day problems of the county's governmental machinery.

This whole system of shifting so much local responsibility to Raleigh is as wasteful as it is improper. It costs the state government much time and money to handle such a tangled mass of local legislation. In addition, much responsibility is removed from various local governing units and cast upon the legislature when the very matters to be decided are purely local in nature and often peculiar to individual communities. Even though the years, this system has simply become a handy political method of evading responsibility and passing the buck. It should be adjusted to provide more home rule.

For The Record, It's Still .000

SEN. OLIN D. JOHNSTON of South Carolina recently sent the State Department the names of some 60 persons said by Sen. Joe McCarty in 1950 to be Communist employees of that department. Johnston asked what these persons' employment and security status was. Here is what he learned, from Assistant Secretary of State Thurston Morton, and announced this week:

Only 40 of the more than 80 were employed by the State Department in 1950.

Seven had never been employed by it.

Twelve are still working for it.

BUREAUCRACY AND THE FEMALE FORM

BY JINGOES, we have been saying that one of these days the federal government, in its eager-beaver efforts to help the citizens mind their own business, would go too far, and in trying to standardize female clothes to fit a standardized female form, the federal government has gone waa-ay too far.

The news of this undertaking comes to us by way of the Washington Post. It appears that back in 1949, a mail order house asked the Commerce Department if anything could be done about confusion in the sizes of women's clothes. Ever willing to be of service, the department consulted the constitution for authority to make such an inquiry, and stumbled over the general welfare clause; it has been said that the general welfare clause covers everything, and large numbers of citizens would agree that the female form is everything indeed.

So Commerce launched the study, and soon enough was joined by the Department of Agriculture a couple of years ago in taking the measurements of 10,000 typical women. As if there were a typical woman. After six years, this fetching study has produced 120 new size standards, such as Miss-12, Miss-Large, and Miss-14. It is garment makers who may adopt the new schedule and "fit the size to the body instead of the body to the size."

This is all very fine. But we must confess that we find it surprising that a end of agriculture experts ever found 10,000 women who would allow their measurements to be taken with this idea in mind. As we understand it, we don't swear we do understand it, women are aware that nature never in-

Ten have transferred to other agencies. How many of the total were Communists? "Not one," said the Department spokesman, of the employees named by McCarty in those charges was found to be a Communist or disloyal to our government.

In other words, despite his more than 80 times at bat, and numerous fouls, the Wisconsin senator's batting average is still .000. The monicker "Triple O Joe" still fits. As Sen. Johnston observed, this check of the records by a Republican administration "should clear up this matter for all time."

tended any two human beings to be exactly alike, but they conceive it to be the business of the garment manufacturers to make them all look alike, at least as far as his measurements and waist measurements and whatnot are concerned. As long as they can squeeze into a size 12, say, in one of these strategic regions, a small alteration in another will not alter the fact that they wear a size 12. The innocent satisfaction they take in wearing a particular size, despite all the probabilities, will be entirely destroyed once they have to admit that they wear one size above and another size below and quite another persons in the middle.

The garment makers, who understand the value of a female form, let them see 1, why, bless their hearts, let them see 2, why, bless their hearts, let them see 3, why, bless their hearts, let them see
