Japanese Diplomat Gets Around, Talks To Many, Smiles Much

When Japanese Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu visited in Washington and New York the past few days, he got around fast, did a lot of grinning and met a lot of highly placed Americans. In the photo at left, the white-haired Japanese holds a reunion with Joseph C. Grew, former U. S. ambassador to Japan, while John D. Rockefeller III looks on. In the center photo, Shigemitsu says something softly to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, and Dulles leans closer to hear it all. At right, the smiling Oriental diplomat has a few words with Vice President Nixon. Shigemitsu headed a party of Japanese dignitaries visiting the U. S. (AP Wirephotos).
