Charlotte And Aviation Grow Together

THE economic future of Charlotte is hitched firmly to aviation's rising star. Additional air service authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board will undoubtedly serve as a new and bracing tonic for the city's commercial and industrial health.

is not the case today. With new flights coming, facilities will be even more cramped in the future.

Moreover, News readers learned just this week that Charlotte has become the third-ranking city in the nation in per capita boarding of passenger airplanes. Only Miami and Atlanta can top the Queen City today.

Fortunately, the new terminal's design provides for easy and relatively inexpensive additions. As City Manager Henry Yancey reminded the City Council this week, it was created with the idea that additional wings would be needed and could be provided when the occasion required.

Education Is A Local Problem

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER'S eloquent plea for legislation authorizing one and a quarter billion dollars in federal grants for school construction obviously stems from a sincere interest in the plight of public education in America. This interest does him credit. But his method of meeting the problem runs contrary to principles that are deeply ingrained in U. S. tradition.

mistake. It would invite the kind of control and influence no community wants. North Carolina is not a rich state but it can provide the classrooms it needs, if it tries, and be secure in the knowledge that it will be the master of its own house.

A General, Greenbacks And Justice

MAJ. GEN. BRYON E. GATES, called out of retirement to face charges of taking $7,000 from an insurance firm for according it preferred treatment at Chanute Air Force Base, is fined $500 and reprimanded in writing.

ill-gotten greenbacks. Add to that $2,440 in extra pay he received while temporarily recalled to active duty, and what does the general get? A profit of $9,400.

No Fiery Cross Below The Border

EXTREMISTS who hoped for a lesson in flame-sporting impetuosity from South Carolina Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. on the race issue this week got instead a relatively mild display of rhetorical discretion.

that a state may nullify any federal law or order it doesn't like. He cautioned legislators that any action in the segregation crisis must be taken with great care, adding that "one must always be on guard against sweeping away in an ill-advised move all we have accomplished so far in maintaining separate schools for the races."

Justice For Jacko

THE loss of Charles S. Frost by resignation as director of the Department of Air Pollution Control is a real and alarming setback for one of the finest programs ever effected by Roanoke.

Justice For Jacko

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—A THING has happened out here recently which has greatly impressed us all. A white judge in Northern Territory of Australia has sentenced two well-to-do white brothers to jail for six months and fined them heavily for beating up six black aborigines with stock whips.

Drew Pearson's Merry-Go-Round

WASHINGTON (AP)—I never tell the truth, Mr. Truman has so vocal on this point of late, but my wife still seems to agree with his original point of view and the other day it's possible that she caught me in an untruth by reason of silence.

She came into the office to hear Miss Cants, my efficient secretary, say, "Well, we finally got Mr. Pearson's reservations on the 'Widely Yelp' column, but I certainly had a hard time doing it."

Doubly Irate

"Well, maybe I wasn't supposed to tell you that," Mr. Elmore said in a somewhat sheepish tone.

People's Platform Would Bricker Amendment Upset The Balance?

where ratification is so easy? ... clearly shows that not even our presidents are infallible.

Consequently, I am one of those who believes that we are facing a very real danger. I also believe that if the public were informed of the real facts a majority of our citizens would probably vote for this amendment.

I do not. I do urge, however, that both sides of the argument be presented. This is, I think, a basic obligation of any outstanding newspaper.

Able patriotic men of integrity have spoken out on both sides of the argument. Fairness demands, therefore, the presentation of the opposing viewpoint, viz., that of those favoring the amendment.

This side of the question was presented in a radio talk I prepared and made for the Delegates of the American Revolution last year during Constitution Week.

You object to interference with the treaty powers of the president. Likewise, apparently, with interference in the presidential power to enter into executive agreements.

Our forefathers who wrote the constitution were unquestionably men of great wisdom. Nevertheless, they could not have foreseen intercontinental plane flights of a few hours' duration, atom and hydrogen bombs, and an international conspiracy of communism.

Editors, The News: I FEEL sure that Ralph Connelly is doing his best when he writes today. Virginia is doing the only democratic thing by letting her citizens decide for themselves if they want to mix the races.

I have noticed statements from many other contributors to People's Platform who mean well, but actually give aid and comfort to the NAACP and others who oppose us.

The Boys At The Dike

Justice For Jacko 'White Supremacy' A La Australia

THE white man made a case that the natives had attacked them with boomerangs and nulla-nullas, rather wicked sharp-edged clubs. The natives said simply that their employers had beat them and showed the scars.

High Court Lacks Low-Making Power

THE 14TH Amendment on which the Supreme Court bases its segregation decisions was unquestionably procured and is legal. Before an amendment to the constitution can become the law of the land it must be voted on by each of the 48 states.

Raiding Moonshine Still Is No Picnic

Mr. Elmore said he had been careful not to disturb the door or make too many tracks in the snow, but had looked over his shoulder and with a gasp told that the rats of mash were bubbling and about ready to run.

decisions to set aside the abominable decisions of the Supreme Court against segregation of the races, you have now said your little piece and you should send a copy of it to Bulgankin and Khrushchev at Moscow and let them send you a medal and a life membership in the Party. They are probably just that grateful to you.
