

McGuire And Tatum Deny Split Reports

FRANK MCGUIRE
... absolutely no conflict

Football Coach Jim Tatum and Basketball Coach Frank McGuire have denied there is a conflict going on within the athletic dept. between their respective sports.

In saying the reports are incorrect, McGuire noted, "In the five years I have been at Chapel Hill, the authorities have wholeheartedly and enthusiastically cooperated with me in our efforts to produce the type of basketball team the University and alumni can be proud of."

Tatum's statement said, "I haven't seen our basketball team play, or even practice, but I understand it is one of the top teams in the country. We are telling the young men we are talking to about attending Carolina that it is our hope that we can build a football team to be just as proud of as the fine basketball program Coach McGuire has accomplished."

SPECULATION

The statements came following speculation in several newspapers, including The Daily Tar Heel, that Tatum was responsible for the changes made recently in the organization of the athletic dept. McGuire explained he "was recently turned down on some requests in connection with the basketball team, but it was explained . . . the administration did not think they were financially feasible. After talking it over with the athletic director, I can understand his position," he said.

"Football had nothing to do with that. There is absolutely no conflict between the two sports. We use different facilities and different personnel, and play in different seasons. We operate entirely separately."

Tatum was out of town when the papers picked up the story, and on his return he said he was "amazed."

TWO DIFFERENT SPORTS

He added he regrets "that Coach McGuire's statements have been turned around in such a way that there could be a conflict between basketball and football. There is no chance of these two sports ever conflicting. They are two different sports and come at different seasons."

McGuire said, concerning reports that he is dissatisfied with the situation, "If I have said anything to imply such, I regret it."

Hodges Asks Democrats To Keep Faith

RALEIGH—(AP)—Gov. Hodges yesterday called for Tar Heel Democrats to keep faith in their party and modernize it. He made the statement in a brief talk of welcome as North Carolina's 14 Democratic presidential electors assembled in the State Senate chamber and formally cast their ballots for Adlai Stevenson.

Hodges noted that the matter of a few thousand votes could have meant the difference in a Republican group meeting to cast North Carolina's electoral votes. Stevenson polled 590,630 votes in the Nov. 6 general election in North Carolina and President Eisenhower received 575,062.

The electors were: 1st District, W. C. Dawson, Elizabeth City; 2nd, W. H. Burgwyn Jr., Woodland; 3rd, Dr. John D. Robinson, Wallace; 4th, W. L. Lumpkin, Louisburg; 5th, Mary Kerr Spencer, Winston-Salem; 6th, Dr. S. S. Neill, High Point; 7th, W. A. Johnson, Lillington; 8th, C. Watson Brame, North Wilkesboro; 9th, Mrs. J. C. Spencer, Lenoir; 10th, Shelton M. Roper, Lincolnton; 11th, C. C. Horne, Shelby; 12th, Claude S. Ramsey, Asheville, and two delegates-at-large, Clark and Fred B. Helms, Charlotte.

Green On Senators' Committee

Prof. Fletcher M. Green of UNC has been appointed a member of an advisory group of historians to aid a Senate committee in designating the five senators in American history "who have contributed most significantly to the development of our country." Portraits of the senators chosen—none of whom can be living persons—will be placed in the Senate Reception Room.

The Senate committee, whose chairman is John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, includes Senators Richard B. Russell, Mike Mansfield, Styles Bridges, and John W. Bricker. The advisory committee of historians is headed by Prof. Allan Nevins, of Columbia University.

The advisory committee will perform two functions. It will choose a panel of 100 historians, political scientists, and other scholars who will be polled for their opinions regarding the choice of the five senators whose portraits will be hung in the Senate Reception Room. Professor Green has been asked to name twenty scholars from the South to be members of this panel.

Second, the advisory committee will decide on broad criteria to guide the hundred panel members in rendering judgment.

State's Voters Cast Ballots For Dead Man

CHARLOTTE—(AP)—North Carolina voters cast 366,732 ballots in last month's general election for a Republican candidate who had been dead more than four months.

Grover C. Robbins of Blowing Rock, candidate for North Carolina secretary of state, died June 24, but the Republican party did not withdraw his name and the State Board of Elections was not notified. Ballots were printed two months after his death.

Democrat Thad Eure was re-elected, polling 737,266 votes, unaware that his opponent was not campaigning.

Raymond Maxwell, chairman of the elections board, said no official notice of the death was given the board and that the situation did not come to light until the Charlotte News queried him about it today.

Robbins was a prominent developer and owned the famous Blowing Rock, mountain scenic attraction.

High School Science, Math Teachers Benefit

Two grants totaling $125,000 will be used by UNC next summer to train high school mathematics and science teachers and college chemistry teachers.

The announcement of the grants, from the National Science Foundation, was made Saturday by Consolidated University President William C. Friday and UNC Chancellor Robert B. House.

It is the second time in two weeks UNC has been tapped to help in a national program to prepare high quality science teachers. Two weeks ago the National Science Foundation gave $287,000 to UNC for a science-and-mathematics institute during the regular 1957-58 school year. The same binned grants total nearly $400,000.

As extraordinary incentives to high school and college teachers, stipends for each accepted student next summer will exceed what the average teacher earns during the same six-week summer period. Each student will receive $450, plus $90 for each dependent, travel allowances, and remission of tuition and fees. A teacher with a wife and two children will get the equivalent of about $800.

The Institute of Natural Sciences, directed by Kenan Professor Arthur R. E., will sponsor the program which will coincide with the first session of summer school in 1957.

A grant of $75,000 will support scholarships for 75 high school mathematics and science teachers; $50,000 in scholarships for 50 college chemistry teachers will underwrite the second course.

The funds will bring to the University nationally distinguished scientists to lecture, and some of the meetings will be open to the public.

The science and mathematics institute for the high school teachers will be under the immediate direction of Professor E. A. Cameron (mathematics) and Professor Victor A. Grenloch (botany). Teachers will be offered a program of course, seminars, lectures and informal discussions, which will bring high school teachers into contact with the sciences and mathematics as living, growing bodies of knowledge, conducted by able scientists who also have the interest and skill to interpret their subjects to high school teachers.

The chemistry program will be directed by Associate Professor S. Young Tyree, with the prime objective of increasing the ability of college teachers to interest students in chemistry as a career. The Institute of Natural Sciences holds the best way to do this is to increase the teacher's basic knowledge of his subject, and to keep him aware of modern developments in sciences.

GOV. HODGES
When the first grant was made known Nov. 29, Governor Luther Hodges said the program at UNC will provide educational leader.

Alert Al Finds Pop's Hideout

By EVANS TAYLOR

If Al's pop thought he could hide a toy firetruck at Al's house, he had another think coming.

Al is the four and a half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kit Carson, who live on Chapel Hill Route Three, and as he said, "I found a pipe twuck."

His father thought it was pretty smart, hiding "Santa's" presents for the like in the pump house. After all, Al never goes out there unless someone is with him.

But Al decided to do a little exploring about the yard. He opened the door to the pump house very quietly, hoping that his mom didn't hear. He looked behind the hotwater heater and like he says . . . "dere it was."

"Daddy, dere at Santa Claus left it dere cause he wouldn't have time to come around on Christmas night," says Al.

"Well aren't you afraid Santa Claus won't come to see you now?"

"Naw," says Al. "Daddy they at he reckoned Sunny'd just have to fine time to come after all."

He said it with such a knowing smile, almost as if he . . .
