

World News Roundup

France Asks Board To Control Canal

LONDON—French Foreign Minister Christian Fautoux proposed today that the Suez Canal be managed by an international authority, but with Egypt acknowledged as the canal's owner.

...dickering behind the scenes with Indians and Russians to block it as the Frenchman expressed his views. We consider that there are points on which agreement should be easily reached although they imply sacrifices for some, including ourselves." Bureau told the Suez Canal conference. He

NOT TRYING to hold up her head, just keeping her eyelids out of the way as she eats watermelon—let the seeds fall where they may. (AP Wirephoto)

Red Party Out

The Communist party is unconstitutional. Within minutes after the Federal Supreme Court announced its long-awaited decision, police squads in major cities throughout the country swooped down on party headquarters.

Property was confiscated and the office padlocked. No arrests were ordered. Immediately after the ruling was announced by Court President Joseph W. Welch, a police cordon was thrown around the court building to prevent any Red demonstration.

Betsy Moves Fast

WASHINGTON—Hurricane Betsy, which has taken a toll of 31 lives and millions of dollars property damage, moved approximately northeastward today about 320 miles off the Virginia Coast. The Weather Bureau said at 5 a. m. EST that the seven-day-old hurricane was advancing at about 23 miles an hour. Betsy was expected to move toward the northeast at about the same or slightly faster rate during the next 12 hours.

Highest winds were reported about 85 miles per hour a short distance east of the center, with gales extending 200 miles to the northeast and east, and outward to about 125 miles in other directions.

Johnson Is Out

CHICAGO—Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said today "my name is not going before the convention" for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination.

Johnson told a news conference he had been up most of the night talking to party leaders about the matter and had received several offers of support for the No. 2 spot. But he declared he had stuck to his original position that he was not interested in the vice-presidency and that he would be very happy to remain in his post as majority leader in the Senate.

Hodges' First Pick: Johnson

CHICAGO—Adlai E. Stevenson, the man nominated for the presidency for the second time by the Democrats, is an egohead turned politician.

He is a witty man in an arena where deadpan earnestness pays off more often. He all but spurned the nomination in 1952. He fought tooth and nail for it in 1956.

There are some political parallels to Stevenson. Woodrow Wilson was an intellectual—indeed, a college president. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a well-to-do man with an itch for public office. Abraham Lincoln was a fast man with a funny story.

FIRST FIGURE Still, no previous American political figure has combined all the special ingredients that go into the complex make-up of Adlai Ewing Stevenson.

Many a professional politician doesn't know what to make of Stevenson—any more than Stevenson seems to understand some of the pros.

The old pro himself, former President Truman, went all out for Adlai in 1952—though with misgivings, as it later developed. This time Truman went all out for Averell Harriman. He said Stevenson couldn't win without help.

Who else? "The old man from Missouri," grumbled Missouri's Harry Truman. Stevenson and Truman points out the unusual position in which Stevenson finds himself.

Special News Photo by Hugh Morton

T'm Chomping for Adlai, Says Sen. Scott.

Special News Photo by Hugh Morton

Speaker Sam Rayburn Watches Gov. Hodges Second Nomination of Adlai Stevenson.

Adlai Becomes Politician

public incumbent Dwight H. Green by the biggest margin in the state's history.

That was one of the strangest episodes in the memory of old-time political observers. Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate.

Scarcely had the momentary surprise worn off when a mass mystical movement toward Stevenson developed. Newsmen, cameramen, politicians flocked to the Illinois governor as if by some herd instinct.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

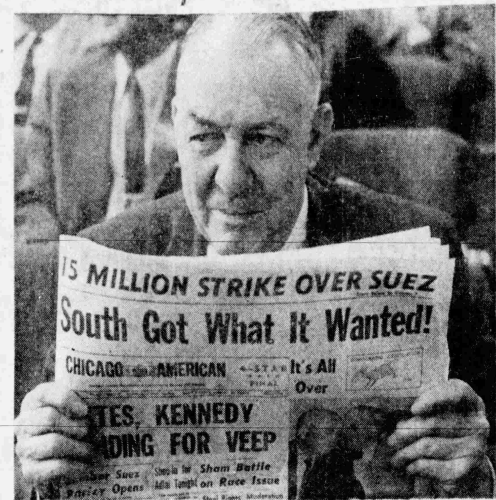

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

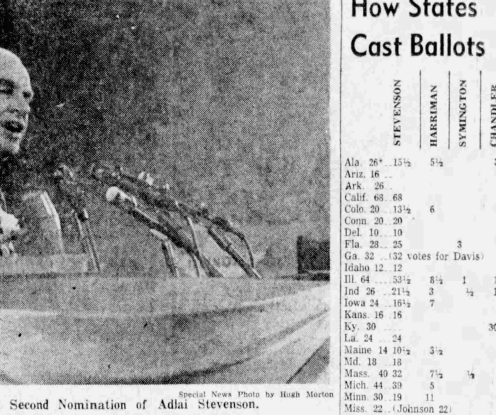

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Tar Heels In Action, At Ease

Special News Photo by Hugh Morton

Love That Headline, Says Smiling Sen. Sam J. Ervin.

Special News Photo by Hugh Morton

Handshake Replaces Lecture

Adlai Becomes Politician

public incumbent Dwight H. Green by the biggest margin in the state's history.

That was one of the strangest episodes in the memory of old-time political observers. Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate.

Scarcely had the momentary surprise worn off when a mass mystical movement toward Stevenson developed. Newsmen, cameramen, politicians flocked to the Illinois governor as if by some herd instinct.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

How States Cast Ballots

Table with columns for STATES, STEVENSON, HARRIMAN, SYMINGTON, CHANDLER. Lists states and their electoral college votes for each candidate.

WEATHER

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE WEATHER BUREAU CHARLOTTE MUNICIPAL AIRPORT. SOUTH CAROLINA. Partly cloudy and continued rather hot today and Saturday with a few isolated afternoon thunderstorms. High today 90 to 96; low tonight 68 to 72.

Candidates Push For Weep's Post

the backing of a group of union leaders, including President Walter Reuther of the United Auto Workers.

There were some signs that Stevenson's decision to toss the nomination to the convention may have been influenced in part by a belief that if he didn't choose Kefauver he would generate some deep-seated resentment within the rank and file of the party.

Major Wagner and Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts, both Roman Catholics, had been considered seriously by Stevenson forces before the decision was reached to throw the convention do its own choosing.

The consequences of Stevenson's nomination were politically shattering to Truman, who may have come one of the forgotten men of the campaign. Truman's offer to speak for Stevenson is likely to be received politely and filed away.

Scotland Killing Solved

the slaying came after an argument started between the two. It said the argument became more violent and eventually Miller said the girl called him an obscene name. He then said he hit her two or three times.

This occurred when the group was in the wooded area. Miller noticed she had a bad eye that was bleeding "awful bad." He said that the men believed the girl, who had passed out, was dead and they then stabbed her.

Miller said all three men stabbed her once, and later somebody stoned her "on the other side." They then put her in the car, he said, drove to the bridge over Roberdell Lake, and threw her in it.

Johnson Is Out

CHICAGO—Senate Democratic leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said today "my name is not going before the convention" for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination.

Johnson told a news conference he had been up most of the night talking to party leaders about the matter and had received several offers of support for the No. 2 spot. But he declared he had stuck to his original position that he was not interested in the vice-presidency and that he would be very happy to remain in his post as majority leader in the Senate.

There are some political parallels to Stevenson. Woodrow Wilson was an intellectual—indeed, a college president. Franklin D. Roosevelt was a well-to-do man with an itch for public office. Abraham Lincoln was a fast man with a funny story.

FIRST FIGURE Still, no previous American political figure has combined all the special ingredients that go into the complex make-up of Adlai Ewing Stevenson.

Many a professional politician doesn't know what to make of Stevenson—any more than Stevenson seems to understand some of the pros.

The old pro himself, former President Truman, went all out for Adlai in 1952—though with misgivings, as it later developed. This time Truman went all out for Averell Harriman. He said Stevenson couldn't win without help.

Who else? "The old man from Missouri," grumbled Missouri's Harry Truman. Stevenson and Truman points out the unusual position in which Stevenson finds himself.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Truman Had To Sit As His Boy Failed

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.

Stevenson gave every evidence of being startled by the impromptu demonstration as for his being a candidate. "Horsefathers," laughed the governor. And he kept right on saying it, though usually in more eloquent language, right up to convention time—while Harry Truman lured and at one stage was ready to back the late Alben W. Barkley for the nomination.