

Five Injured in Bombing To Protest SLA Arrests

SEATTLE (UPI) — A bomb blast protesting the arrests of Patty Hearst and members of the Symbionese Liberation Army rocked a crowded Safeway store Thursday night, injuring five persons.

Two minutes before the blast a woman — who sounded young — called KING-TV station and said: "This is the George Jackson Brigade. A bomb has been planted at the Safeway Store at 15th and John. It is in retaliation for the arrests of our SLA brothers and sisters in San Francisco."

George Jackson was a San Quentin inmate and author who was killed during an escape attempt in 1971.

A group calling itself the George Jackson Brigade took credit for a bombing May 31 at the state corrections office in Olympia.

The message concerning Thursday's blast was received at 9:28 and as the KING news staff called police they heard of the blast on the police radio, reported Andy Reynolds said.

The bomb, planted near a checkstand, completely knocked out several large plate glass windows and spread bags of fertilizer and dogfood which had been near the windows into the check-out area. Food was also knocked off shelves.

A man seen running from the store, described as about 5'9", was sought by police.

The same store was bombed early Monday morning by Ralph Patrick Ford, 23, who was killed as he armed a pipe bomb. The Monday blast caused more than $3,000 damage.

A fully armed pipe bomb was found in the federal building here Saturday and a telephone call directed officials to a note in which "Unit 9 of the New World Liberation Front" claimed credit for placing the bomb in memory of comrades massacred in Attica and Chile.

A spokesman for the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Administration of the Treasury Department said the Monday blast was already under investigation and "we are checking into Thursday's blast."

Two of the injured persons were taken across the street to Group Health Hospital, a spokesman for the hospital said. Both appeared in satisfactory condition.

Kay E. Robinson, 22, 5214 17th Ave. N.E., a checker at the store, was standing 12 feet away when the bomb went off. She was not knocked down but received welts on the left side of her body from flying debris.

Jerry Harris, 26, a bus driver for Metro Transit, 1502 14th Ave. S., was briefly knocked unconscious by the blast. He was suffering a head injury and having X-rays taken but appeared to be in satisfactory condition.

Two others were sent to Harborview and complained of abdominal pains because they had been knocked to the floor. The persons brought to Providence Hospital for a superficial wound to the left side, was treated and went home. He had debris in his hair.

The other injured were identified as Nicky Anderson, 20; Frances Simmons, 48; and Marguerite Richard, 20, all of Seattle.

SLA Fugitives Captured

Patty Hearst

Improbable Candidates

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — She was the granddaughter of newspaper titan William Randolph Hearst. She turned that wealthy and privileged background around to become one of the most famous radicals in American history.

Patricia Hearst's arrest Thursday was the latest step in the bizarre road the 21-year-old newspaper heiress has traveled since she was violently kidnapped Feb. 4, 1974, from the apartment she shared with her fiancé.

She was then a pretty University of California sophomore from a wealthy family looking forward to her forthcoming marriage to Steven A. Weed, 26, who had been her high school teacher. A friend said "she was the kind of girl who could have been anybody's daughter."

But as the months dragged by and the FBI futilely sought a trace of her, she apparently turned from a victim of Symbionese Liberation Army terror to a member of the terrorist group.

Step by step her voice grew more militantly radical on tape recordings delivered to authorities, finally denouncing her family and her nation.

She adopted the name "Tania" and was photographed participating in a San Francisco bank robbery which netted $10,800 for the SLA coffers.

On April 15, Tania stated that she had participated in the robbery by choice. In a tape-recorded statement, she called her father, San Francisco Examiner member Randolph A. Hearst "pig Hearst" and Weed a "sexist, ageist pig" whom she never wanted to see again.

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Like Patricia Hearst, her three fellow fugitives were improbable candidates for membership in the terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army.

William and Emily Harris were active members of their fraternity and sorority at Indiana University.

Wendy Masaka Yoshimura of Fresno, was a nice, quiet gardener's daughter who never got into any trouble — until she moved to the Berkeley-Oakland hub of political revolt.

All three, arrested Thursday with Miss Hearst, have seen their lives take a course unimaginable to their friends just 19 months ago.

Mrs. Harris' father, Frederick Schwartz, who lived on the edge of a golf course in an Indianapolis suburb, last heard from his daughter in a letter received Feb. 1, 1974 — three days before the Hearst kidnaping.

She seemed emotionally charged and told her parents she and Bill had developed a relationship that "no longer confines us, and I am enjoying relationships with other men."

It developed the Harrises were involved in the hiding of Miss Hearst for several weeks in a San Francisco apartment.

Then, on May 16, 1974, Harris was caught shopping in a Los Angeles sporting goods store. From across the street, Miss Hearst allegedly opened fire with an automatic weapon, spraying the street with bullets to cover the escape of Harris and his wife.

That night the trio were accused of two instances of kidnaping to get cars, and apparently were wandering around Los Angeles aimlessly. They apparently did not go to the south-central Los Angeles house where on May 17 six SLA members were killed in a police shootout that left the house in flames.

The Harrises and Miss Hearst were last heard from three weeks later in a tape recording accusing the police of mass murder. It was theorized that — with the SLA virtually wiped out — the three hid together, lacking friends to help.

Miss Yoshimura, 32, entered the case when her fingerprints were found with others in a Pennsylvania farmhouse where the fugitives were believed to have stayed last year.

How she got mixed up with the others was a mystery. She had no known connection with the SLA.

Miss Yoshimura, however, had been a fugitive since 1972 when a cache of explosives was found in her Berkeley garage. A draft of a letter was found announcing a planned attack on an ROTC building, and three men were arrested and convicted in the case.

In her home town of Fresno, Calif., she was remembered as a well-behaved girl with a pleasant smile. She had turned to politics after moving to Oakland where she went to college, took a job as an artist in an advertising firm and became active in the women's movement.

Her Fresno background was no more a clue to her eventual conduct than that of the Harrises.

Harris, 30, was a Vietnam veteran and a junior high school teacher in Bloomington, Ind. He and Emily, 28, dated for several years before they married.

He Was Pleased With Neighbors Until Arrests

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — It was just a day or so ago that Henry Good mentioned he was pleased with his new neighbors. That was before he found out Patricia Hearst lived on the block.

"In fact, I said to my wife just yesterday that it was good to get some nice quiet neighbors like that," Good said.

But the streets were far from quiet Thursday as crowds jammed the neighborhood for a glimpse of the modest two-story house at 625 Morse St. that was the end of the long trail for Patricia Hearst.

Oscar Perez, a student who lives on the street, was parked in his car when Miss Hearst and her companion, Wendy Yoshimura, were brought out in handcuffs.

"Everything was extremely smooth," he said. "They acted like everything had already happened."

The Outer Mission district block where Miss Hearst was captured is a middle class, treeless, grassless neighborhood with many retired families.

The area's blue collar are a mix of blue collar workers, students and retired persons. Ethnic backgrounds include Latins, Filipinos, Irish and a few blacks. Most of the homes are stucco attached single-family homes typical of middle class San Francisco architecture of the 1930s.

Neighbors say most residents mind their own business. That may be why few had seen the new neighbors at the red-front, two-story walkup.

Nor did many witness the arrest.

Patricia's landlord, Jerry Prill, was in the garage below the apartment cutting some boards during the early afternoon. He was on his way out when he said the FBI stopped him.

"They showed me pictures and their badges," he said. "Then I knew it was her."

Prill said he took the agents through the garage to the back entrance to the second-level apartment. Prill said one of the girls apparently tried to run for the front. He said he heard an agent shout, "Don't move or I'll blow your head off."

Miss Hearst reportedly said: "Don't shoot. I'll go with you." She went. And as she did, the neighbors talked.

"It's a shock to learn that Patty Hearst was living on your block," said restaurant worker Don Cecchi, 18, who lived with his family on Morse Street for 13 years.

Jenne Anberg, who lives in a house abutting the Hearst walkup, is caring for the fugitives' black cat at the request of the FBI.

She never saw the slender heiress, but did see a young man who came to the Morse Street apartment at night.

"All I knew is that the landlord told me a nice young couple moved next door," she said. "They sure were good neighbors — they were quiet."

Marion Sickinger said she was resting on the couch during the arrest and learned of what happened a few doors away when her husband said, "Mom, the radio said they just arrested Patty Hearst down the block."

PATTY HEARST Gives Up With A Whimper

Radicals Vow Support

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Three self-described radical organizations have vowed support for their "strong and sensitive comrades" of the SLA arrested Thursday.

The United Prisoners Union, Bay Area Research Collective and Prisoners of War Offense-Defense Committee noted that "Four comrades — Bill and Emily Harris, Patricia Hearst and Wendy Yoshimura, were captured after more than a year and a half underground."

"The fact that they remained underground for 50 months shows that people in this country have actively supported them. Growing numbers have come to know that the SLA is on the side of the people.

The statement continued that "we will continue to support these strong and sensitive comrades and will not let them be isolated. Only united can we prevent the government from eliminating us one by one."

Occupation 'Urban Guerrilla'

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (UPI) — Patricia Hearst, who listed her occupation as "urban guerrilla," when she was booked, was reunited today with her newspaper magnate father, her mother, and sisters, who greeted her with yellow roses.

The 21-year-old fugitive, dressed in prison blues, emerged from her maximum security jail cell for her first meeting with her family since she was abducted from her apartment in Berkeley, Calif., 82 days ago.

"We had a very happy reunion with Patty," said her mother, Catherine, who wore a black dress with pearls. "We laughed and hugged and kissed each other."

"She said she wanted to come home with us."

"She looked fine," continued Mrs. Hearst, "but she is terribly thin. She had her hair dyed."

Mrs. Hearst, who arrived only hours earlier from Los Angeles, entered the 6 by 6 foot meeting room first and embraced Patty. She was followed by her husband, Randolph, and two daughters.

"We had a happy conversation about the family," Mrs. Hearst later told a throng of about 100 reporters.

The Hearst both said they were surprised and relieved at the capture of their daughter by the FBI in a San Francisco apartment Thursday afternoon, 19 months since the Symbionese Liberation Army kidnaped and converted her to its cause.

Hearst, wearing a gray checkered sport coat and tie, said his daughter "was very calm. She said she was perfectly willing to come home. She enjoyed seeing us and enjoyed seeing her sisters."

"Neither Kujro nor I had ever loved another individual, the way we loved each other," she said. "I was ripped off by the pigs when they murdered Kujro. Because of this, I still feel determined to fight."

Miss Hearst is believed to have narrowly escaped being caught in the conflagration that was the beginning of the end of the SLA. How close she came is one of the mysteries that she could now clarify.

Although neighbors once said she was seen in the house only hours before the gun-battle began, their reports are contradictory and in at least one case, admittedly false.

Weather Roundup

California coastal sections are covered with the normal low clouds and fog this morning but elsewhere skies are clear.

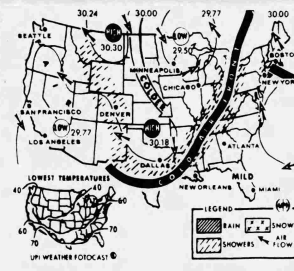

The thunderstorms reported late Thursday over the Sierra Nevada dissipated during the night. However, a recurrence of scattered thunderstorms is expected there this afternoon.

In Kings County, sunny days and clear nights through Saturday with temperatures slightly above normal. Highs 88 to 95. Lows 57 to 63.

Southern Sierras forecast is for mostly fair weather through Saturday, but with some afternoon and evening cloudiness with a chance of thunderstorms. Highs at the 5,000 foot level in the mid 70's and lows in the 50's.

Santa Maria San Luis Obispo coastal area will be mostly fair through Saturday, but with coastal fog and low clouds extending inland nights and mornings. Highs in the 70's and low 80's, except for in the 40's along the beaches. Overnight lows in the 50's. Northwestern winds at 10 to 20 mph in the afternoon and evenings.

The weather map this morning shows a dominant high system covering the Western states combined with thermal low pressure in the California interior. This will cause sufficient onshore flow to maintain low clouds and fog along the coast through Saturday. No major changes in weather patterns are indicated for the next few days.
