

Party Lines Disappear In War Crisis.

Reynolds Wants to Know What Happened Before Declaring War

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Americans accepted Japan's war on their country today with an outpouring of pledges of unity and loyalty.

The sudden attack virtually wiped out the lines between Congressional supporters and opponents of the Administration's foreign policy. And to the White House came message after message from persons high and low, offering to do whatever they could.

All M. Landen, former Governor of Kansas and Republican Presidential nominee in 1936, wired the President:

"The Japanese attack leaves no choice but to permit us to interrupt our neutrality over a foreign foe."

Lawmakers such as Senator Wayne Morse, Democrat, Montana, and Representative Fisher, Republican of New York, who have been outspoken critics of the Administration's foreign policy, joined the all-out call for unified action by the nation. Wheeler said at Billings, Mont.:

"This is the time now to do our best to help pull them out of them."

Fish declared that the American people should "present a united front in support of the President and the United States, the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces."

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, issued this statement: "I hope every American will do his duty. We are at war, but when war comes to us, I stand for the swiftest and most decisive action."

Delegates to the various state delegations at the 50th Annual Meeting of the American Association of State and Local Governmental Units, in Atlanta, Georgia, voted yesterday to declare war.

Representative C. G. Garroway, the latest to sever diplomatic and consular relations with Japan, said:

"Japan has violated every principle of international law and ethics."
