Woman Hurt In Collision

City police said one person was hurt when the car in which she was riding as a passenger was the State of South Carolina into the rear of W. Franklin Ave. Saturday afternoon.

Officer J. H. Prather said Mrs. Charles Williams, 2110 W. Second Ave., was taken to Garrison General Hospital visibly hurt. The young woman was riding with her husband, William Charles Williams, 21-year-old machanicist, when the accident happened about 3:10 p. m.

The 1958-model car was stopped near Vine St., waiting to make a left turn when it was rear-ended by a car from South Carolina.

Prather said the other car, a 1957-model two-door, was traveling westward and was driven by Jay Raymond Proctor, Kings Mountain, who was driving a taxi.

Neither driver was reported hurt. Prather estimated damage to the rider car at $200 and to the newer one at twice that amount.

MAN CHARGED

Mural Police Saturday arrested a 22-year-old man and charged him in two cases of breaking and entering and larceny. He was identified as Claude Mauney, Chestnut Ridge.

Mauney is charged with entering the home of Miller Hastings on Highway 277 near the Lithium plant and stealing several items on Oct. 14. The stolen items were three hams, two saws, and a case of motor oil. The hams and saws were recovered.

The accused man, charged by Det. Capt. E. H. Groves, is being held here under $1,000 bond. Officers said Mauney's arrest led to recovery of a power chain saw found in South Carolina. The power saw was believed taken in Cleveland county.

PRACTICE HERE

Sam Groves, formerly associated in law with Verne E. Shive, has returned to Gastonia to practice.

The young attorney, who worked more recently with a Charlotte firm, is located in the Commercial Building and is engaged in handling both civil and criminal cases.

The son of Mrs. Robert B. Groves of Lowell and the late Dr. Groves, he is a graduate of the Wake Forest schools of higher learning.

He and his wife, Sylvia, live on Club Dr.

FIGHTS RETURN

'Dear Chairman ...'

Here's Text Of JFK Reply

WASHINGTON AP—The text of a letter sent Saturday night by President Kennedy to Soviet Premier Khrushchev on the Cuban crisis follows:

Dear Mr. Chairman: I have read your letter of Oct. 26 with great care and welcome the statement of your desire to seek a prompt solution to the problem. The first thing that needs to be done, however, is for work to cease on offensive missile bases in Cuba and for all weapons systems in Cuba capable of offensive use to be rendered inoperative under effective United Nations arrangements.

Assuming this is done promptly, I have given my representatives in New York instructions that will permit them to work this weekend—in cooperation with the acting secretary general and your representative—an arrangement for a permanent solution to the Cuban problem along the lines suggested in your letter of Oct. 26. As I read your letter, the key elements of your proposal—which seem generally acceptable—are as follows:

1. You would agree to remove these weapons systems from Cuba under appropriate United Nations observation and supervision; and undertake, with suitable safeguards, to halt the further introduction of such weapons systems into Cuba.

2. We, on our part, would agree upon the establishment of adequate arrangements through the United Nations to insure the carrying out and continuation of these commitments—a To remove promptly the quarantine measures now in effect and to give assurances against an invasion of Cuba. I am confident that other nations of the Western Hemisphere would be prepared to do likewise.

If you will give your representative similar instructions, there is no reason why we should not be able to complete these arrangements and announce them to the world within a couple of days. The effect of such a settlement on easing world tensions would enable us to work toward a more general arrangement regarding "other armaments," as proposed in your second letter.

Which you made public. I would like to say again that the United States is very much interested in reducing tensions and halting the arms race; and if your letter signifies that you are prepared to discuss a detente affecting NATO and the Warsaw Pact, we are quite prepared to consider with interest any such proposals.

But the first ingredient, let me emphasize, is cessation of work on missile sites in Cuba and measures to render such weapons inoperable, under effective international guarantees. The continuation of this threat, or a prolonging of this discussion concerning Cuba by linking these problems to the broader questions of European and world security, would surely lead to intensification of the Cuban crisis and a grave risk to the peace of the world. For this reason I hope we can quickly agree along the lines outlined in this letter and in your letter of Oct. 26.

The letter was dated Oct. 27, and was signed "John F. Kennedy."

Barringer Hopes JFK Stays Tough

Carroll Barringer told a rally at St. Stephens near Hickory Saturday night that he hoped the president will adopt the same kind of stand against government waste and boondoggling that he appears to have adopted on Cuba.

Barringer, opposing Basil L. Whitener of Gastonia in the 10th district congressional race, said he was "encouraged" by the stand on Cuba but that he regretted the same sort of attitude had not been displayed on needless spending.

Returning to his charge that Whitener had voted for an aquarium for Washington, Barringer said, "I commend the frankness of my opponent in telling the people in Hickory Thursday night that he voted for a $10 million fish tank boondoggle—I trust he will continue to inform the citizens of his and the administration's action on wasteful spending."

Barringer repeated his request that his opponent be sent a fish in protest of his vote on the aquarium.

Barringer called it "a black day for the taxpayers" in citing the 22-inch, $3,562 telegram that Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Celebrezze sent two blocks to each member of the House in an effort to get administration backing on proposed legislation.

Barringer appeared at the St. Stephens rally after campaigning earlier in the day in Avery county and speaking briefly at an afternoon rally in Newland.

SOME TURNABOUT

LONDON (AP)—The first chief justice of England quashed a conviction of a junk dealer who bought an undrivable car for $5.

As scrap iron and then was fined $50 and banned from driving for a year because the car was not licensed and insured.

What projects should be started first? How to insure that local people, not imported workers, get the jobs? How should the spending be divided between rural and urban areas? How, indeed, should the total be shared among the

'Let Luther Do It' ...

Sec. Of Commerce Hodges: Full Of Beans, Ambition

WASHINGTON AP—"It got to be something of a saying around the place, 'Let Luther do it.' I ment rush, actually appropriated only $400 million, not the full $200 million authorized.

A sturdy, white-haired businessman who personifies salesmanship and confidence, Hodges is lacking both jobs with an awareness of the troubles ahead, but with a determined success.

It is the same sort of confidence that marked his rise from birth in a one-room log cabin to the governor's mansion in North Carolina, from work as a mill hand to a $75,000-a-year position as a textile executive.

Of the public works program to relieve depressed areas, Hodges says: "I am extremely happy. It is going very well. We will run it sympathetically and efficiently."

And in a Philadelphia speech soon after the senate voted the new trade powers by a 78-8 margin, Hodges declared he was eager to get into some "tough-minded, realistic, quid pro quo" bargaining with Europe for tariff cuts.

"We have no intention of giving, for political reasons, more than we get in these trade negotiations," he said. "I am for tough negotiating."

Hodges is disappointed that a comparatively small amount of America's production is now sold to other nations.

"We need to get exports," he says. "Good merchandising methods for building markets are the next big field of world trade."

"Of these U.S. companies that could get into exports—we estimate 300,000—only 4 per cent are getting in. To put it another way, less than 4 per cent of our Gross National Product is sold abroad."

Other countries run 4 or 5 times that. The field is absolutely ripe."

Seated in a leather chair in his huge walnut-paneled office, Hodges answers questions in a soft but positive voice.

How does he react to the complaint the Kennedy administration is antibusiness?

"I point out that is a perfectly silly thing to say," he declares. "The President has stated it. How can the administration be anti-business. If you don't make profits, we don't get the taxes. We want a sound dollar and we believe in profits."

"We are not antibusiness. In a big and complex government, of course, you'll have a few people who help create the image that the administration is not for businessmen."

Did Hodges' 1961 difficulties with the Business Advisory Council contribute to a feeling that the administration might be antibusiness? He wanted the council to include small as well as large-business men and to stop having secret meetings.

"It did for a short while, but that is completely over with. The president has gone as far as he possibly can to make businessmen feel welcome."

The Business Advisory Council did break its ties with the government, dropping the "advisory" from its name. However, it and various government departments, the latter at Kennedy's direction, have since cooperated on research work and other matters.

Assuming there'll be a tax cut next year, what sort of cut could be most helpful?

"I don't want to pick out a figure. I have said that every individual ought to have a tax cut and that the top brackets are far too high. Corporations should be cut at least to where they were."

The federal tax on top bracket incomes now takes as much as 91 per cent. The tax on a corporation's income is 52 per cent; it used to be 47 per cent.

Do you think it wise to cut taxes without reducing government spending?

"Tax cuts can stand on their own feet. If you can cut expenses, that's preferable. I wouldn't say you have to. If you cut taxes and handle it well, that will strengthen the economy and will support spending—if you have a need to spend."

Hodges was born March 9, 1898 in Pittsylvania county, Va., near the North Carolina border, in a one-room log cabin built by his father, a tenant farmer. He was the eighth of nine children. His mother died when he was 12, when he took a mill job at 50 cents a day for 10 hours work.

Later a married sister took him in while he worked as a railroad news butcher. At 17, with $62, he entered the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

He worked his way through the university, selling Bibles and getting a pat 4 a. m. to stir up the grade fires in professors' houses. He still found time for athletics and to be elected president of his senior class. "Like will succeed," the yearbook said.

On graduation he went to work for $1,000 a year in the same textile mill, in Leakesville-Spray, N.C., where he had worked as a boy. He gradually worked his way up and by 1933, when he was 35, he was production manager of all mills of Marshall Field & Co. In 1930, at the age of 32, he decided to retire—"to devote the rest of my life to public service."

Amid considerable surprise, he was elected to the first office he ran for, lieutenant governor of North Carolina. He went on to become one of the most energetic, industry-attracting governors any state has ever had.

Deaths And Funerals

RUSSELL L. SELLARS — Funeral services will be held this afternoon for Russell Lee Sellars, who died early Saturday at his home, 108 Oak Trail.

The Rev. W. H. Pheagin will officiate at the 4 p. m. services to be held at Ebenezer Methodist Church. Burial will be in Gaston Memorial Park.

Mr. Sellars, son of the late Jerome and Ellen Neal Sellars, operated Sellars Texaco Service in Belmont. He was 52 years old.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Kate Hendricks Sellars, two sisters, Mrs. Louis Buchanan of Charlotte, Mrs. Joseph Froneberger of Cherryville, four brothers, Everett Sellars of Cherryville, and Wiley, Ervin and Howard Sellars, all of Belmont.

Trans-Canada Road Linking 5,000 Miles

WASHINGTON—Forty years ago a man planted a sign, reading "Vanconver 5,000 Miles," in the soil of Nova Scotia and drove off in his car.

He made the trip all right—using scores of ferries over rivers and lakes, and by fitting locomotive wheels to his car for rail travel in the Rockies. But it was a major expedition.

Now Victoria, British Columbia, and St. John's, Newfoundland, standing at opposite ends of the second largest country on earth, are linked by a superb main street—the Trans-Canada Highway.

The 5,000-mile, billion-dollar roadway connects all ten Canadian provinces, says the National Geographic Society. More than 500 bridges span waterways along the route.

DREAM SINCE 1885 The highway serves about 90 per cent of Canada's population, and it has been a dream of the nation since the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway in 1885.

Work began in the depression years but was halted by World War II. In 1949, the National Government at Ottawa passed the Trans-Canada Highway Act to subsidize construction of the highway by the various provinces.

The last link—a 92-mile stretch in Glacier National Park—opened on July 30, 1962, ending what had been called "the world's longest detour." This was a loop of 177 miles around the Big Bend of the Columbia river.

Not surprisingly, the last section was one of the most difficult to build. Eighty per cent of it lies in rugged mountains. Where it crosses the Rockies at Rogers Pass, the road follows a route first tried by the railroad and later abandoned after 236 men had died in construction accidents.

Equipping the section with avalanche protection ran the cost up to two million dollars a mile. Steel shelters protect the roadway from rock and snow. Howitzer emplacements stand ready to avert big slides by triggering small, controlled avalanches.
