Testimony May Start In Hoffa's Trial

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI)—The government hoped to start putting evidence before a jury today in its effort to jail Teamsters Union boss James Hoffa. Judge William Miller said a "prolonged" trial is indicated.

A jury for the trial of Hoffa was completed Thursday in an overtime session of federal court. Hoffa is accused of illegally receiving more than $1 million from a Michigan trucking firm.

Miller was scheduled to summarize the charges against Hoffa to the jury today and then both sides were to make opening statements. The government was to begin presenting its case afterward.

The jury is composed of seven women and five men with three men and a woman as alternates in case any member of the jury becomes ill.

If convicted, Hoffa could be sentenced to as much as two years in prison and fined as much as $20,000.

"Every indication is that this will be a prolonged trial," Miller said. He told the jurors after they were elected that they might have to be locked up sometime during the trial.

"Your verdict is to be based solely on evidence introduced in this courtroom," he said. "You are not to consider any publicity about this case."

The judge said that there probably would be a great amount of publicity because of "the very nature of this case and the parties involved."

The accident took place at about 3:30 p.m. near the intersection of Nelson and North streets.

MacIn was still under treatment today in Kings Daughters Hospital.

Council Debates Latin Usage In Church Liturgy

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The Ecumenical Council, debating use of modern languages in liturgy, heard arguments today that the precise words of ancient Latin could lose their full meaning if translated into such tongues as Bantou or Chinese.

The 2,323 council fathers who attended the seventh session of the historic gathering listened to 22 speakers on the subject of liturgy, the Roman Catholic form of prayers and public worship.

A main point of discussion is whether to allow English and other modern languages to be used in part of the Mass instead of Latin.

The oral communione issued following the session said many speakers wanted to keep the Mass and other liturgical ceremonies completely in Latin.

"There are reasons in favor of Latin because its use has not only a traditional value but also plays a real unifying role," the communione said, explaining why some fathers supported a Latin liturgy. "In addition, Latin is particularly adequate for theological and dogmatic use. Its psychological and ascetic value also is remarkable."

Historic Florida Keys Bristling With Arms As Buildup Goes On

KEY WEST, Fla. (UPI)—The storied Florida keys today were a bristling defense bulwark facing the Cuban coast 90 miles to the south.

Portable radar and communications "installations" dotted the string of keys that bend west-southwestward from the mainland 165 miles to Key West.

Large truck convoys arrived carrying rocket launchers, generators and other equipment lashed under olive drab tarpaulins. Big trucks hustled up and down the overseas highway, some of them marked "explosive." Armed guards accompanied the trucks.

IN this island city, historically a Navy man's town, Army jeeps now were commonplace. Few of the Army, Navy and Marine troops, jamming into the keys were seen in town, but an occasional GI waited for a lift at a pickup station.

Security restrictions were tight and authorities had nothing to say about the nature of the buildup, particularly after the call from the White House Wednesday for voluntary cooperation by news media.

No 'Punishment' For Mississippi

RAYMOND, Miss. (UPI)—Rep. John Bell Williams said Thursday Secretary of Commerce Luther Hodges has written him saying the administration does not intend to threaten business conditions in Mississippi.

Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy recently was quoted as saying he had asked businessmen to use influence or threats of curtailing their Mississippi interests to bring about peaceful integration in the state.

Williams wrote Hodges asking if it is administration policy to use economic pressure.

Hodges said Kennedy had been misquoted and added, "I can assure you it is definitely not the administration's policy to discourage new or curtail existing business activities in your state."

Some businessmen were urged, at Kennedy's suggestion, "to do what they could to forestall the possibility of violence in areas where their companies operate in Mississippi," Hodges said.

DeGaulle Levels New Warning

PARIS (UPI)—President Charles de Gaulle delivered a new warning to the French nation today that he will quit at once unless it gives him a sweeping "yes" vote in Sunday's constitutional referendum.

In a late radio-television appeal to the country, De Gaulle declared that without this massive vote his "historic task would at once be impossible and, consequently, terminated."

He made only one passing indirect reference to the East-West crisis over Cuba, when he urged that France needs a strong lead of state "in this world of ours, which is so dangerous—as is seen at this very moment."

It was De Gaulle's third broadcast appeal to the nation within a month and the shortest, lasting barely five minutes.

Speakers for six political parties have called for a "no" vote on De Gaulle's proposed constitutional changes. The spokesmen made their points in a series of broadcasts Monday and Tuesday.

De Gaulle already has warned he will quit for good if the voters turn him down or give him a majority "yes" vote that is "small, mediocre or indecisive."
