French Election Fails to Enhance De Gaulle Position

PARIS —#— President de Gaulle kept France anxiously waiting today to learn if he considered his referendum victory decisive enough for him to stay on as president. The outlook was that he would remain in office and that the nation would be plunged deeper into bitter political strife.

An aide said De Gaulle would have no comment on the vote for the moment and that he would not return from his country home to Paris until tomorrow.

The country's voters vested his political life to a solid majority, saying he would resign if the approval was "weak, mediocre or doubtful."

De Gaulle won, but the margin was less than his followers expected and only a minority of the French electorate approved his approval.

Complete official returns from metropolitan France, including Corsica, were Yes — 12,810,848, 61.76 per cent of valid ballots.

No — 7,939,399, 38.24 per cent of valid ballots.

But the "Yes" votes represented only 46.3 per cent of the registered voters. Fully a fourth of the electorate abstained, mostly by staying at home although some cast blanks or spoiled their ballots. De Gaulle's backing on previous referendum had never been less than 56 per cent of all the voters.

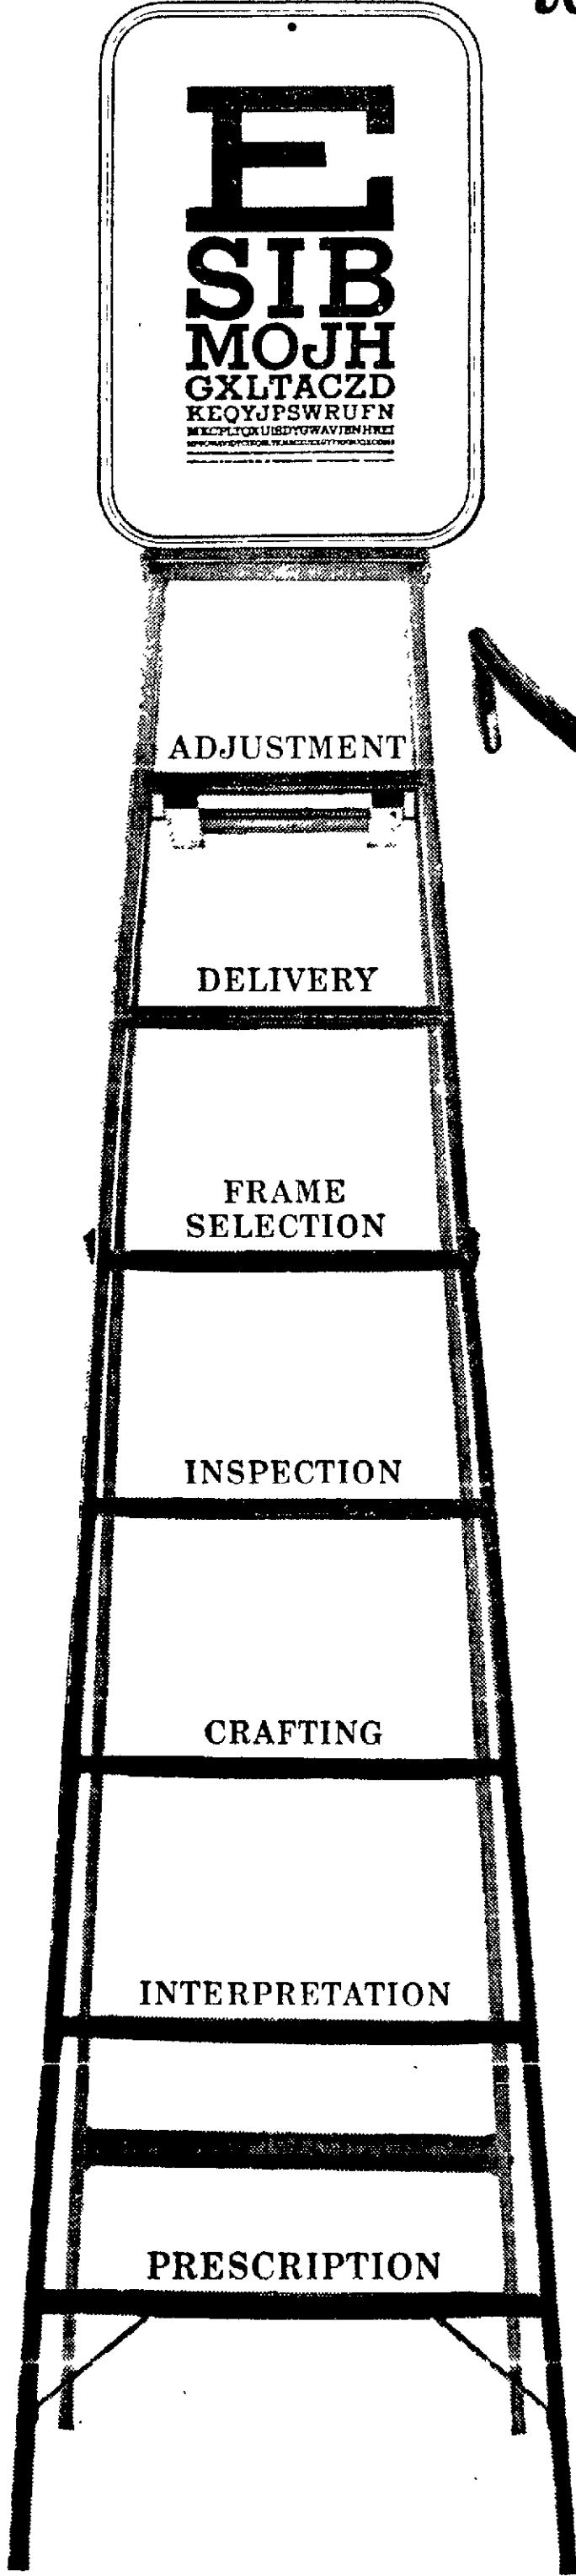

Both Premier Georges Pompidou and Interior Minister Roger Frey hailed the result as a popular mandate for the general, and predicted De Gaulle would take the same view
