Heikman pulled out his services automatic. With it he scratched his scalp. "Get me pencil and paper," I suggested. "I want to make a report through to Copenhagen." "Good you mentioned it first," Heikman said. "I was waiting for it. It's what I came for. I'll leave you writing material here. Write it tonight. Can you write in the dark?" "Yes."

"No handwriting. Print your letters."

"All right."

Heikman handed me a block of paper and three pencil stubs. "I'll be in the inside of the building pulling. I notice you're getting somewhat nervous. Heikman worked for months in the Gestapo and was regarded as reliable.
